Court reinstates order on blue law

United Press International
AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court ordered a Dallas County district court judge Wednesday to reinstate a court order prohibiting retailers from violating the state's controversial blue law.

The court ordered Dallas County District Judge Dee Brown Walker to reinstate the temporary injunction that barred Gibson Products Company, Inc. from violating the blue law, which prohibits the sale of 41 specified items on consecutive Saturdays and Sundays.

Gibson's challenge began in 1975, when Walker issued a temporary injunction ordering Gibson to comply with the law until the case was settled. Gibson appealed that order, but the blue law was upheld by the Supreme Court.

Despite the Supreme Court's earlier ruling that upheld the blue law, Walker issued an order on Dec. 2, 1981, declaring the blue law unconstitutional and also revoked the temporary injunction barring Gibson from violating the law.

A Bexar County first: GOP woman senator
United Press International
SAN ANTONIO — Cyndi Taylor Krier, who used the president's coat-tails and an aggressive campaign against a veteran Democrat to win a seat in the Texas Senate, said Wednesday she will try to abolish legislative continuances.

Krier, 34, defeated 20-year legislator Bob Vale by a 61 percent to 39 percent margin to become the first woman and the first Republican sent to the Senate by traditionally Democratic Bexar County voters.

She will be the only woman in the male-dominated Senate. "I haven't absorbed that the election is over," said Krier, a political novice and a former aide to retiring Republican Sen. John Tower. "I feel I should be out walking door to door."

Krier, who agrees in principle with President Reagan's political and economic philosophies, said she would "kick and scream less with a conservative label," but that she preferred not to be labeled at all.

She said Reagan's landslide victory helped her win, but that she received more votes in some precincts than the president.

Krier also ran an aggressive campaign against Vale, who she accused of missing important legislative committee meetings and abusing the practice of legislative continuances.

Krier said she intends to keep her campaign promise to abolish the practice of continuing civil and criminal trials for legislators who are attorneys.

Union polices its own picket lines

United Press International
WHITE SETTLEMENT — Union officials tried to eliminate the confrontations and violence that marked the first two days of a walk-out at General Dynamics by policing their own picket lines Wednesday, officials said.

Council to consider city train regulations

The College Station City Council Thursday night will consider an ordinance that would allow the city to regulate train speeds within the city limits.

The council will hold a public hearing on amending the city's ordinances to include regulating train speeds within the city limits in its traffic code.

In other business, the council will hold three public hearings on zoning requests.

The council also will declare the week of Nov. 12-17, 1984 as "Heal thy Baby Week" in College Station.

William Hughes Jr. "They're just playing it day by day."

Pat Lane, local president of the machinists' union currently embroiled in a wage dispute with General Dynamics, was scheduled to appear in Hughes' court Wednesday, but the hearing was cancelled at the request of attorneys for both sides, said the bailiff.

After a confrontation between police and angry pickets outside the plant turned into a bottle-throwing melee Monday, Hughes ordered the pickets not to impede the entry and exit of vehicles and to refrain from injuring, threatening or destroying the property of anyone entering or leaving the plant.

A second confrontation Tuesday night saw eight striking union members arrested, most on charges of impeding traffic. Tarrant County Sheriff's deputies were called in to help local police control the crowd of about 250 protesters.

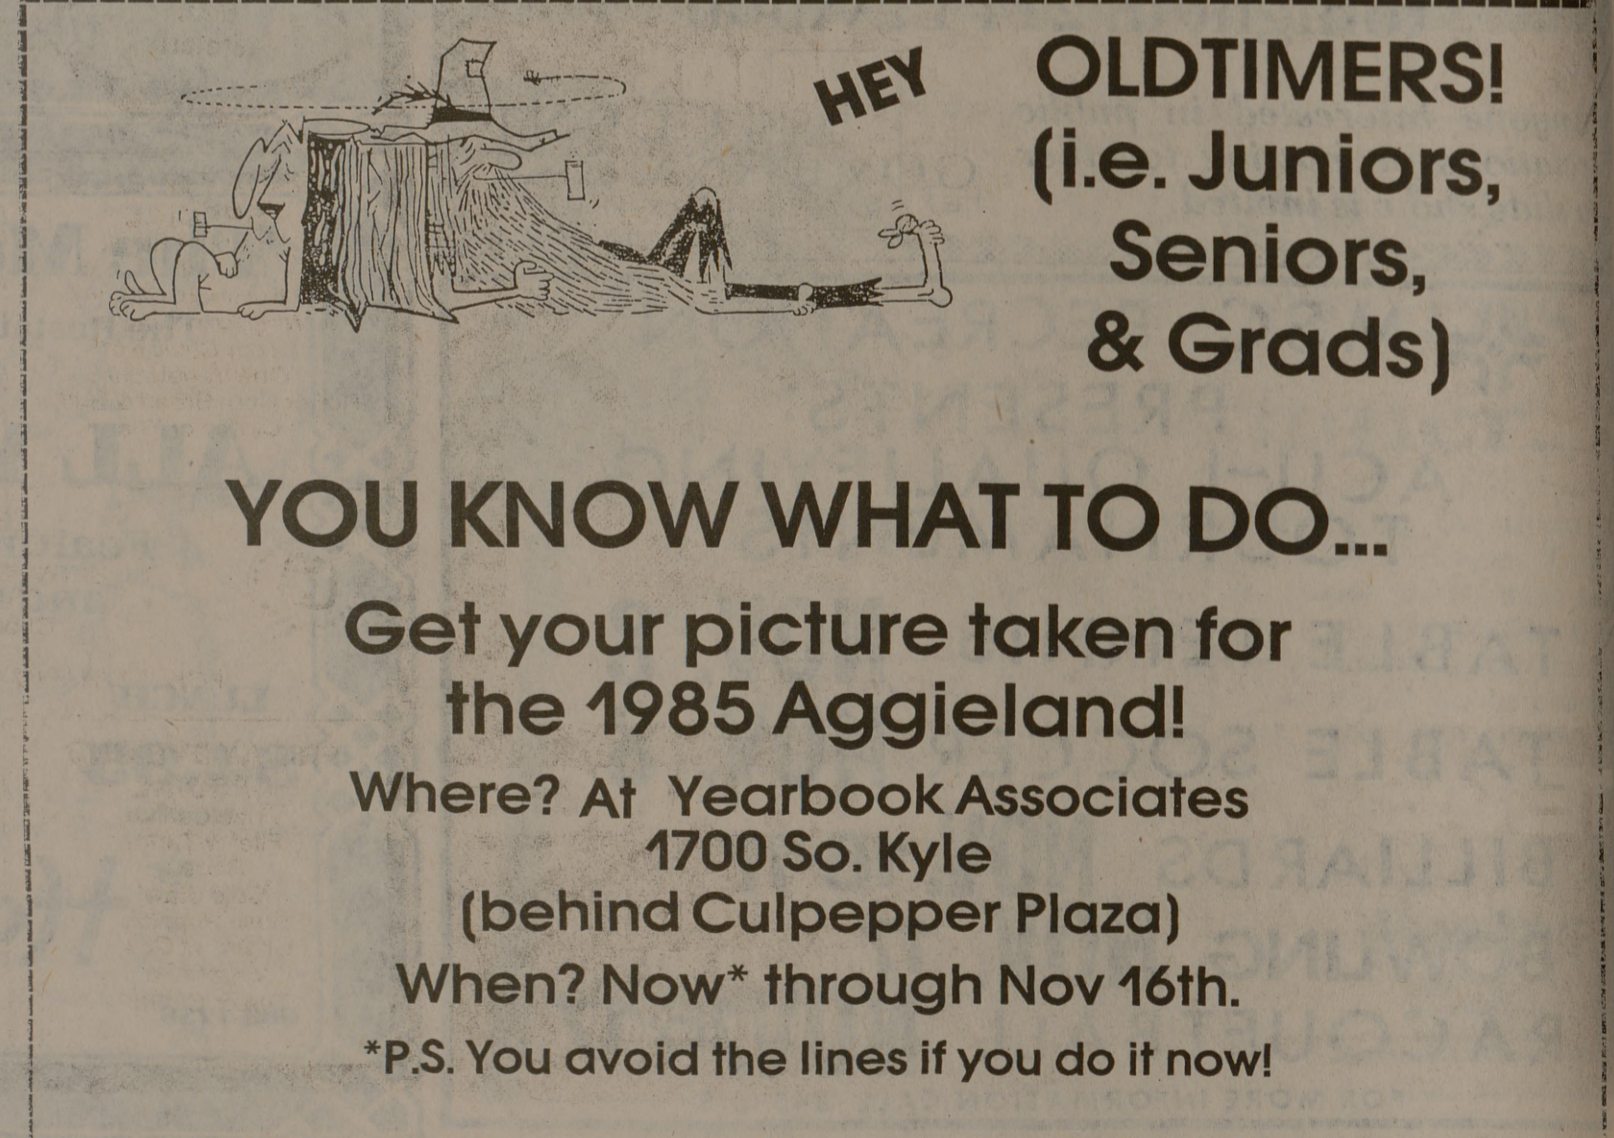

A total of 15 people have been arrested so far in connection with picketing outside the General Dynamics plant since the strike began at midnight Sunday, police officials said.

The scene outside the White Settlement installation was quiet Wednesday afternoon with 75 to 100 workers gathered outside the company's main gate. Union members in red vests monitored the situation, acting as liaisons between the crowd and police.

"We just got a call that one beer bottle was thrown out," City Manager Bob Salinas said.

Union spokesman Jim Conley said he did not know of any altercations occurring Wednesday except for a few pickets being "bumped by cars."

"I don't think there were any serious injuries," he said.
