Over 4,000 Texas vets file claims

United Press International

DALLAS — Texas leads the nation in numbers of Vietnam War veterans who have filed claims for a $180 million trust fund benefiting veterans exposed to the de-lia-tant Agent Orange.

As of late October, 4,589 Texas were among the 70,631 veterans seeking a part of the trust fund, established by seven chemical companies that manufactured the herbicide, which contains dioxin. The firms were named in a 1979 class-action suit.

Houston attorney Benton Musselwhite, who represents 1,700 of the claimants, attributed the state figures to the size of its population and nature of its people.

"We probably sent a lot more people to Vietnam and we are probably not as sophisticated at avoiding military service as some of the other states," Musselwhite said. "We're good old country boys."

The attorney said U.S. District Judge Jack Weinstein of Brooklyn has extended until Dec. 31 the deadline for filing claims. Weinstein is expected to rule soon on whether a related lawsuit seeking $1 billion from the federal government may be taken to court.

The government has been immune since 1950 to lawsuits by veterans claiming service-related injuries, Musselwhite said.

Attorneys say the biggest dispute remaining in the case is how to distribute the trust fund, which has grown to more than $190 million with interest. Weinstein is expected to decide on a disbursement plan by January.

Musselwhite expects payments to be authorized for victims of chloracne, a skin disease; soft tissue sarcoma, a cancer; and prophyria cutanea tarda, a liver disease. Other forms of cancer, birth defects and nervous system disorders also may be included, he said.

The attorney expects disputes over whether emotional problems and birth defects will be authorized for payments. More than one-third of the Texas claims involve birth defects attributed to the effects of Agent Orange.

Martin Luther King Sr. dead

United Press International

ATLANTA — The Rev. Martin Luther King Sr., father of the slain civil rights leader, died Sunday at his home, a family spokeswoman said. He was 84.

King died in the presence of his daughter and grandson Sunday afternoon, family spokeswoman Bernita Bennett said.

Christine King Farris, King's only surviving child, was with her father when he died. Also present was his grandson, the Rev. Derek King, a minister with the Christian Council of Metropolitan Atlanta.

"Daddy King," as he was affectionately called, preached love and forgiveness despite seeing his wife and eldest son shot down and another son drown accidentally, all during a six-year period.

"I speak to my people about what it means to love," King said. "We have to rid ourselves of every ounce of hate. I can't afford to hate. I know what it leads to."

His son, the Nobel Peace Prize winner and leader of the civil rights movement, was assassinated April 4, 1968, as he leaned over a balcony outside his motel room in Memphis, Tenn., where he had gone to lead a protest by striking sanitation workers.

Sixteen months later, the Rev. Adam Daniel King, the youngest of the elder King's three children, drowned in his Atlanta swimming pool.

On June 30, 1974, King's wife of 48 years, Alberta Williams King, the woman he called "Honeybunch," was killed by a crazed youth as she played "The Lord's Prayer" on an organ in Ebenezer Baptist Church.

King took the assassination of his son hard. He fainted while viewing the body and later visited the crypt often, standing at the white picket fence reading the inscription on the marble slab: "Free At Last, Free At Last, Thank God Almighty I'm Free At Last."

He later said he was convinced James Earl Ray, sentenced to 99 years in prison for the slaying, did not act alone, and he called for an independent investigation into the assassination.

King's bitterness seemed to ease somewhat after the death of his wife six years later. "He seems to have taken on some of her softness, inner speculation and serenity," a close friend once said.

King presided as patriarch of the King family and the church on Atlanta's "Sweet Auburn" Avenue where he served as pastor for 46 years.

At age 75, he stepped down as senior minister at the 4,000-member church but continued as pastor-emeritus and his booming voice occasionally was heard from the pulpit.

In his later years honors poured in for King. In 1983 he received the Peace Prize awarded by the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change, headed by his daughter-in-law Coretta Scott King.

Before it was safe or popular to speak out against discrimination and segregation, King aligned himself with people and organizations that were working for change.

He led a campaign for the equalization of teachers' salaries and conducted a "voter education" program from the pulpit of the Ebenezer Baptist Church, where he succeeded his father-in-law as pastor.

Poland notes 66 years of independent rule

United Press International

WARSAW, Poland — A deeply divided Poland marked its 66th year of independence Sunday as thousands of Solidarity supporters marched to demand a Poland "free" from communist rule and priests warned of a clash between the government and the church.

World War I veterans and government officials attended a gala concert in Warsaw's Royal Castle to celebrate the anniversary of Poland's independence in 1918 after 123 years of partition by Austria, Germany and Russia.

Deputy parliamentary speaker Jerzy Ozdowski, addressing the concert crowd, called for reconciliation and condemned the recent murder of a pro-Solidarity priest by secret police, which created turmoil within the government and sparked a crisis in church-state relations.

But in cities across the nation, Poles still enraged by the kidnap and murder of Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko flocked to churches to hear pro-Solidarity sermons and filled city streets flashing the "V for victory" sign of the banned union.

In the capital of Warsaw, thousands of helmeted riot police used water cannons to disperse some 6,000 people chanting "Solidarity, Solidarity" as they left St. Johns Cathedral in the city's old town and tried to march to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Catholic priest Stanislaw Malkowski, who visited Popieluszko's parents, said Sunday the couple had been threatened by two men posing as Solidarity militants.

Malkowski said the two men had visited Popieluszko's parents' farm near the town of Okopy in northeast Poland and threatened to burn it down if church services in their son's honor gained too much public support. No other details were available.

In the southern city of Cracow, thousands of Solidarity supporters attended an independence day mass at Wawel cathedral and then marched through the city's center in support of the union.

At Popieluszko's Warsaw church, where his body was buried Nov. 3, another priest said the murder had "brought forth a new Solidarity in people's hearts and minds."

The church was decked inside with hundreds of illegal Solidarity banners and one strung up outside the building bore the slogan, "In Solidarity Towards Independence."
