Blue law defiance causes legal bout

United Press International
HOUSTON — The Retail Merchants Association has threatened more legal action against a group of discount retailers that has been defying the Texas blue law and opening for business on Sunday.

Stores at Buyers Market Mall have done business the past two Sundays. Merchants opted to do Sunday business after a state district judge lifted an injunction prohibiting Handy Dan hardware stores in Houston from selling on consecutive Saturdays and Sundays.

Earlier this month a state district judge in Dallas ruled the law is unconstitutional, a decision being appealed by the Retail Merchants Association.

Two of four small shops sued by the RMA after opening for business Nov. 4 remained closed this past Sunday. Six more suits will be filed against businesses in coming weeks, said RMA president Maury Aresty.

"Ninety-nine percent of the merchants in Houston are observing the blue law," Aresty said. "If they buyers Market merchants have a problem with the law, they have the state Legislature that they can work with."

Harris County District Attorney John Holmes said his office would prosecute blue law violators if shop owners' deputies charge merchants with breaking the law.

"I don't want somebody to get complacent and think the district attorney isn't going to do anything about it," he said. "But I'm not going to be the cop for a county of almost 4 million people."

Pollster: woman president in '92

United Press International
LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — Despite the defeat of the Democratic presidential ticket, the outlook of many Americans on whether the nation could have a woman president has changed since the nomination of Geraldine Ferraro as a vice presidential candidate, a recent survey showed.

Separate polls on the question were conducted at Walt Disney World's Epcot Center at the beginning of this year and again in September and October. The question asked during both periods was, "When, if ever, do you think a woman could be elected president?" Ferraro's name was not mentioned in either polling period.

In the early survey, 46 percent of 15,000 respondents said they felt it could happen as early as 1992. In the later survey, well after Ferraro's July nomination, 54 percent of 5,600 respondents said it could happen as early as 1992.

Among men, positive responses went from 37 percent in the early poll to 45 percent later. Among women, the comparative response went from 60 percent to 65 percent.

In a related question, participants were asked during both survey periods if they would vote for a woman for president if her views matched their own. The survey results were virtually identical during both periods, with 64 percent saying probably or definitely yes in the early survey and 65 percent in the later one.

Court may deny mom

United Press International
AUSTIN — A state appeals court Monday considered a request to free a Houston woman jailed two months for refusing to answer all the questions of a grand jury that indicted her stepson for murder.

Attorney Randy Schaffer asked the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals to free Odette Port because her testimony would be of no value to the Harris County grand jury that indicted David Port, 17.

Mrs. Port and her husband, Bernard, were found in contempt of grand jury Sept. 12 for refusing to testify. Port was freed last Friday after answering the panel's questions. But a district court judge ordered Mrs. Port to remain behind bars because she did not fully cooperate with the grand jury.

There was no indication when the appeals court would rule on Schaffer's request. If the court refuses to free Mrs. Port, she could remain jailed until Jan. 31, when the grand jury's term ends.

The younger Port was indicted Sept. 28 for murder in the June 7 shooting death of mail carrier Deborah Sue Schatz, 23. He remains free on $20,000 bond, and a hearing on several motions in his case was set for Wednesday.

Prosecutors claim the grand jury investigation remains active, and Mrs. Port's testimony is needed to determine if the charges against her stepson should be upgraded to capital murder.

Schaffer previously lost requests to sever state and federal courts to free the pair, who claim a parent-child privilege protects them from testifying against their son.
