Marine service informs public

By DALLAS MORRIS
Reporter

On the eighth floor of the O&M Building is an office that produces a variety of publications ranging from seafood recipe cards to brochures on how to cut fuel costs.

The office is the Marine Information Service and is part of the Sea Grant College Program.

"The Sea Grant Act said that people should be informed about the marine environment in order for them to enjoy it and to enjoy it in a safe way," said Laura Colunga, head of the Marine Information Service.

The Sea Grant College Program, created in 1966 by an act of Congress, was established to encourage and provide money for research on marine topics, and to support the Marine Extension Service, which serves people who make their living in a marine environment, Colunga said.

The information in the publications on marine subjects is unbiased, Colunga said.

"We're not here to take sides or anything, we just present the results of research, and we present it in a way that people can understand it," she said.

The Marine Information Service writes news releases about marine research that is supported by the Sea Grant Program, Colunga said.

"Part of Sea Grant's mandate was to inform the public about the importance of the marine environment and marine issues and to make the results of the research the program supports well known to people," she said.

"We serve the researchers of our program," Colunga said. "The advisory part of Sea Grant is the one that is actually out serving the public directly. We provide the publications, slides, the stuff they need. They're the ones that are out there one to one giving meeting in their local areas on certain subjects."

The researchers don't work for the Marine Information Service. They are professors in various departments at A&M and at other schools, Colunga said.

Of the many marine oriented magazines and brochures the Marine Information Service publishes, the booklet on hurricanes has been the most requested, Colunga said.

UTA student gets $33,000 phone bill

United Press International

ARLINGTON — A university student who received a $33,533 telephone bill last month reached out and touched people all over the United States and at least seven other countries, according to telephone company records.

But Carol Kuhler, 19, a sophomore at the University of Texas-Arlington, denies she spent all semester on the telephone.

"My mother is the only one I ever call and she lives in Dallas," she said.

Kuhler speculated that a telephone calling card she had recently applied for was either taken from her apartment mailbox or mailed to the wrong person.

The phantom caller, who apparently shared the card with a number of friends, placed hours of calls the first week in October to Indonesia, Bangladesh, Italy, Sweden, Egypt, Kuwait, Jordan and other nations, Kuhler said.

All the calls were made from pay phones, making them almost impossible to trace, she said.

About two weeks ago she received a 254-page bill from Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. totaling $33,533.52.
