Consumers fight railroad problems

United Press International

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — The executive director of a consumer group fighting for equity in the railroad industry Monday encouraged a state legislative subcommittee to join the fight to strengthen the Staggers Rail Act.

Robert Szabo, executive director of Consumers United for Rail Equity (CURE) of Washington, D.C., spoke before a subcommittee on coal mining.

He said CURE wants to develop legislation that will assure effective protections against railroad abuses of shippers subject to railroad monopoly power.

He also said CURE is attempting to alert consumers and policy makers to the "rail rate and service inequities" being suffered by "captive" shippers under the Interstate Commerce Commission implementation of the Staggers Rail Act of 1980.

The act is named after Harley O.
Staggers, a retired Democratic congressman from Beckley. Szabo said the mishandling of the act has left the 76-year-old Staggers embarrassed to have his name on the legislation.

"We're not critical of the act but what's been done with it (by the ICC)," Szabo said. He said strongly enforced legislation would mean more reasonable rail rates for the transporting of West Virginia coal which would lead to an increase in exports for the state.

"The Europeans may be able to negotiate a good deal at the mouth for the coal but not with railroads," CURE's executive director said.

Szabo said the average cost of shipping coal by rail to West Virginia has increased 73 percent since 1970.

In 1980, 15.3 tons of coal went into the state and cost electricity payers $63 million, Szabo said.
It cost $87 million in 1982 to move 14.7 million tons of coal.

"We don't want to change the Staggers Act," he said. "The ICC lost the balance of the revenue of railroads and the interests of shippers."

"We want to strike a balance that is reasonable," Szabo said.

He noted two major problems with the implementation of the Staggers Act. First, he said the shippers are monopolized. Many coal companies have no choice of what railroad can use and are often overpaying 25 percent for shipping, he said.

The second problem is "competitive access," Szabo said. He said different railroads cancel arrangements with other lines to compete with another railroad.

Szabo said he believed the railroad equities would become an issue at the next meeting of Congress.

Police suspicious of anonymous call

TYLER — A man who reported an underground organization was responsible for the slaying of a city worker whose body was found at a wastewater treatment plant may have wanted to throw investigators off, police said Monday.

Police found the body of John Clayton, 35, at the Southside Wastewater Treatment Plant shortly after midnight Saturday. He had been shot twice in the lower back with a shotgun, and his car was engulfed in flames.

An anonymous caller told the Tyler Morning Telegraph about 30 minutes later that the "United Forces of Worldwide Liberation" had executed Clayton because he had "betrayed the organization, had committed acts of sexual deviancy and was involved with Communism."

The newspaper said the man sounded as if he was reading from a prepared statement. The FBI said it had no knowledge of the group.

Tyler police spokesman J.D.
Smith said the caller may have been trying to lead police from the real killers.

Someone involved with the slaying might have given "this story just to cover up their tracks and send investigators in another direction," Smith said.

An autopsy was performed on the body Monday, and authorities said they were looking into Clayton's background for leads.

Clayton moved to Tyler in October from Big Spring where he worked in the city utilities department. His 35-year-old girl friend, who police would not identify, moved from Big Spring to Tyler with Clayton, and was at the treatment plant when the killing occurred, Smith said.

Clayton was working the 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. shift when he went out to check meters, and a woman told police she heard what sounded like an explosion. She called police after covering the body near his home 1973 station wagon.

The caller told the newspaper car was burned because Clayton forfeited his property with his execution.

Howard Shivers Sr., Clayton's pervisor at the Big Spring Utility Department, said they had worked together about two years, but he knew little about Clayton's personal life.

Tom Decell, the Big Spring police works director, said Clayton had moved to Tyler to take a better job.
"He was a good employee. He was reliable, ambitious," he said.

Stenholm withdraws bid to oust Tip O'Neill

WASHINGTON — Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, said Monday his threatened challenge of Speaker Thomas O'Neill was more than a "symbolic gesture" and stemmed from concerns about voters' negative perceptions of O'Neill.

But Stenholm, who heads the 33-member House Conservative Democratic Forum, announced he was abandoning his threat after realizing there were "not enough" votes for him to beat O'Neill and the Massachusetts Democrat promised to work to give the conservatives a greater say in the Democratic workings of the House.

"It started out to be more than a symbolic gesture," the Stamford conservative told reporters. "I've never started something I didn't intend to finish."

"I believed at the time it was important to change the coach. When it became apparent we would not be able to change the coach, we decided to try to change the game plan," he said.

Stenholm, recently re-elected to his fourth term, said the conservative Southern Democrats known as "Boll Weevils" want a greater say in the House Democratic leadership through key committee chairmanships, appointments to major committees and selection of a potential speaker's advisory group.

"The current decision-making process has gotten us into a great deal of trouble in this country—particularly in the South and in the West," he said. "The party has perceived as having moved too far to the left."

"In Texas, we lost five traditional Democratic seats because of perception problems," he said. "The perception in Texas and South is the speaker is the cause of it."

Stenholm said the conservative first will try to work with the Democratic leadership on issues but necessary will align with President Reagan on issues as their constituents wish.

O'Neill met with Stenholm Rep. Buddy Roemer, D-La., Friday and agreed the Boll Weevils not had a full voice in leadership councils, but also said the conservative Democrats have not fought enough for their views.

Police Beat

The following incidents were reported to the University Police Department through Monday.
