A&M's Childress named All-SWC

United Press International
 DALLAS — Texas A&M's Ray Childress was named to the first team All-Southwest Conference squad by the United Press International Tuesday. Childress, a senior defensive lineman, was the only Aggie voted to the first team.
 Kenneth Davis and Jim Wacker, who on the field and from the sidelines helped bring about one of the most startling reversals in the history of SWC football, were named offensive player and coach of the year, respectively.
 Davis, the nation's third leading rusher, was one of four Texas Christian University players to land spots on UPI's all-SWC offensive team — the first time the Frogs have had that many players on the first offensive unit in 26 years.
 TCU put together the fourth best offense in the country and became the first team in the history of the SWC to produce more than 5,000 yards total offense in a single season.
 Flanker James Maness, tight end Dan Sharp and tackle James Benson were the Horned Frogs joining Davis on first team offensive unit.
 TCU last placed four players on the first-team offense in 1958 when tackle Donald Floyd, center Dale Walker and running backs Marvin Lasater and Jack Spikes were listed on the offensive unit.
 Wacker, in his second year at TCU, coached the Frogs to only their second winning season in 19 years. TCU posted an 8-3 season after going 1-8-2 in 1983.
 UPI's all-SWC team was voted upon by a panel of sports writers and sports broadcasters.
 Other than TCU, the only SWC teams with players on the first-team

ID: Don't leave home without it

MARCY BASILE
 Staff Writer
 "Excuse me, may I see your ID?"
 Sound familiar? If you play racquetball, basketball or some other intramural sport, it should sound real familiar. Especially to those people who never have their IDs.
 It seems some "Good Ags" just can't seem to get the hang of carrying their IDs around with them. I know. I check IDs for intramurals.
 Now, I don't understand the big deal about toting a little piece of plastic around in a pocket, purse or backpack. IDs don't weigh so much that you need to be a member of the weightlifting club to carry one around.
 Face it. Someone, somewhere along the line is going to ask you for your ID to make sure you really are enrolled in the University. Intramurals is not the only place where an ID is needed. Check cashers, food services people and test proctors all need to see A&M IDs.
 Before I get the few conscientious people out there really upset, I will admit that some really novel ways of carrying IDs to the courts have surfaced. One guy had his ID safety pinned to his shirt, in plain view, with the picture facing out. That guy was my best friend that day.
 Another thing I don't understand is why people get all bent out of shape when they are told they can't enter the building or play intramurals with a paid fee slip, instead of an ID. Fee slips can't take the place of a current ID.
 Hey folks, that's the breaks. Intramural staff members sympathize with you when you leave your ID at the dorm but, to put it bluntly, waaah. There is no way to prove you paid your fees and are who you claim to be without an ID. It's that simple.
 As hard-nosed as this policy might seem, A&M students are lucky. At U of H if you don't have your ID you are kindly escorted off campus and told not to come back until you have your ID and fee slip. We let you go home by yourself.
 What about the weekend warriors who just want to "shoot a little ball?"
 Yes, you, too, need an ID to walk up the stairs to the courts, even when it's not basketball season.
 An ID can actually be a really neat thing to have around. How else would you be able to check out pylons for an "Almost Anything Goes" or softballs to throw at Dracula's heart? Cashing checks drawn on out-of-town banks would be awfully hard to do, too, without an ID.
 Besides, if you bring your ID with you to play intramural sports, you'll receive fast, wonderful service instead of the dreaded "I'm sorry I can't let you play without an ID."
