First spring All-U night planned

By BRANDON BERRY
Sports Writer

The first annual spring All-University night, planned for 7:30 p.m., Monday, Jan. 14, is designed to rejuvenate Aggie spirit.

Even though some people live or die for the A&M-Texas football game, the Athletic Department hopes spring sports will not suffer low attendance and a lack of student enthusiasm as a result.

Scott Cummings, the student representative to the Athletic Council and one of the founders of the new All-University Night, said the problem must be addressed before it reaches epidemic proportions.

"The main purpose of (All-University Night) is to have a continuation of the spirit we have shown during football season," Cummings said. "Fifteen thousand all-sports tickets were sold, so we know the interest is out there."

"But a lot of these people aren't using their tickets. I've been working with Lynn Hickey (Texas A&M women's basketball coach and assistant athletic director) and she's really doing some great things with her team, but I'm afraid nobody will ever see them."

All-University Night has usually been considered a fall tradition at A&M. Members of the football team, Head Coach Jackie Sherrill, Texas A&M President Frank Vandiver and the student body president address a crowded G. Rollie White Coliseum about the state of A&M football.

This All-University night, however, will emphasize the spring women's sports along with the traditional men's post-football athletics — swimming, tennis, golf, baseball and basketball. Most of these coaches and athletes will attend.

In addition to the athletes, yell-leaders and Cummings, the Aggie Band will be there, as well as Reveille V. Unlike the All-University Night in the fall, neither President Vandiver nor the student body president will speak.

The resulting yell practice will be short and to the point — "An hour at the very most," Cummings said.

"It's important to get as many people out there as possible because we need to show these people we have spirit year-round and not just through football season."

Cummings said the early low attendance at basketball games is somewhat understandable due to the end of the semester, final exams and the fact the season is just now getting started.

"But when you can't get more than 3,000 people to a basketball game against a good team like Oral Roberts, you begin to think there must be a communication problem," he said.

Since the previous mouth-to-mouth communication methods evidently aren't working, what can those interested in resuscitating the fortunes of the "other" sports in Aggieland do to show their support?

"Get involved and go out and watch them," Cummings said. "It's been a long time since I've seen G. Rollie filled for a basketball game. They're a good team. Just because they aren't Southwest Conference Champions doesn't mean they deserve no support."

Another team, according to Cummings, that deserves more support is the women's softball team. They are two-time national champions, runner-up to UCLA last season, and considered to be one of the best collegiate softball programs in the nation.

"We've talked to Bob Brock (A&M's head softball coach) and he's just thrilled to finally get some attention for his team," Cummings said. "How many other national champions have we had at A&M recently?"

Head Yell Leader Kelly Joseph will be the master of ceremonies for the first ever spring All-University night. Cummings said he hopes the first Monday night of the coming spring semester will be the start of a new tradition at A&M.

"I really hope it goes well," Cummings said. "We tried to put a spring All-U Night on last year, but we weren't able to get it organized in time."

"But these people really need some support. It's what A&M stands for — the spirit, the pride and the tradition."
