Inmate stabbed with plexiglass weapon

United Press International
LOVELADY — An Eastham Unit inmate was stabbed three times Tuesday with a homemade plexiglass knife designed to escape discovery by prison metal detectors, a Texas Department of Corrections spokesman said.

They're trying to beat the system," TDC spokesman Charles Brown said of the use of heavy plastic knives. "We'll have to go back to the drawing board again."

Inmate Ricky Harris, 27, was stabbed in both arms and the right side with a 10 3/4-inch weapon in the unit dining hall about 5:30 a.m.

Harris, who is serving a 99-year sentence for aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon in Harris County, was in good condition in the Houston County Hospital in Crockett. Beller, who was placed in administrative segregation pending an investigation, is serving a six-year sentence for a Harris County robbery.

Vietnamese still control rebel base

United Press International

BAN SA-NGAE, Thailand — Bloody fighting raged along the Thai-Cambodian border Tuesday as Cambodian guerrillas, stubbornly ignoring an order to retreat, tried to retake the major non-communist rebel base of Ampil after Vietnamese troops had overrun it.

In what military analysts called a serious escalation of tension along the Thai-Cambodian border, Vietnamese gunners shot down a Thai Air Force jet fighter, killing one of its pilots.

Some 4,500 guerrillas loyal to ousted Cambodian Prince Norodom Sihanouk were fighting their way toward Ampil to support rebels of the Khmer National Peoples Liberation Front, or KPNLF, who are trying to recapture their base from Vietnamese troops.

Thai military sources said at least 20 Cambodian rebels had been killed and 50 wounded during the second day of the battle for the KPNLF base, overrun by the Vietnamese earlier Tuesday.

Three rebel groups — Sihanouk's forces, the KPNLF and the communist Khmer Rouge — are fighting 160,000 Vietnamese troops that have occupied Cambodia for the last six years.

Vietnam began an offensive last year to capture the KPNLF bases inside Cambodia but fighting has frequently spilled over into Thailand.

Light arms and machine-gun fire echoed across the battleground at Ampil as Cambodian rebels employed guerrilla tactics to dislodge the 3,000 Vietnamese troops who overran the Ampil camp in an assault backed by Soviet T-54 tanks.

Routed KPNLF guerrillas fled the burning camp and, ignoring orders, hundreds made their way to an anti-tank ditch near Ban Sa-Ngae, 43 miles northeast of the major Thai border town of Aranyaprathet.

"The orders were to retreat and fight another day," a KPNLF spokesman said. He said that after an initial pullback, the rebels regrouped and re-entered the camp, determined to regain control.

Sihanouk's forces left their base 12 miles northeast of Ampil at dusk but were intercepted by Vietnamese soldiers opening a second blood front along the border.

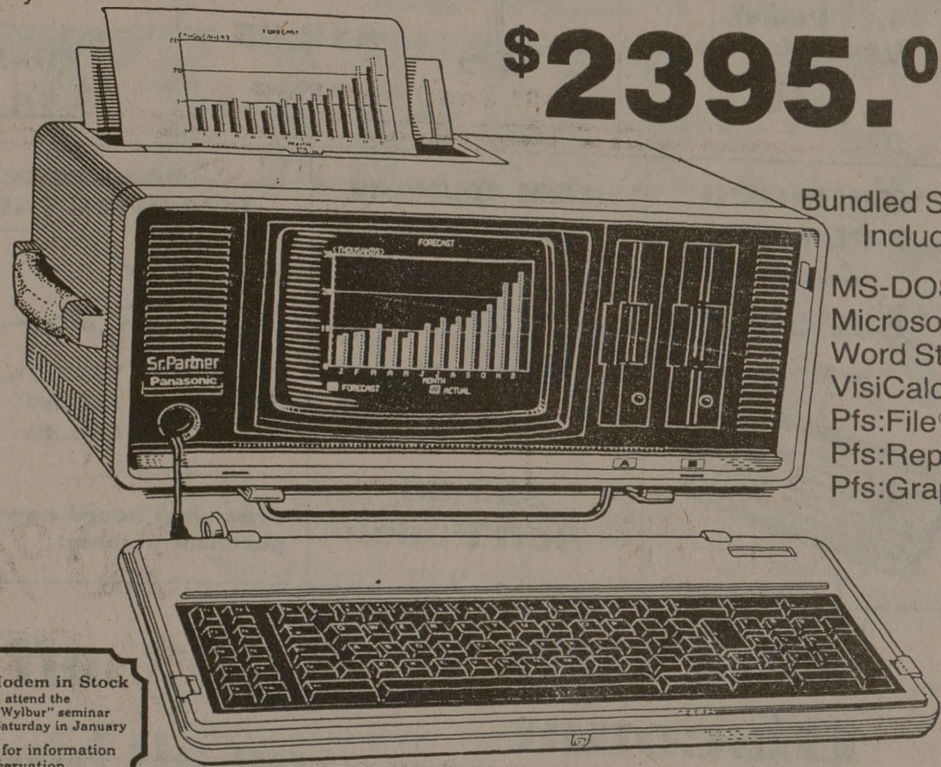

Ampil was the last of three major KPNLF border bases to fall to Vietnam's dry season offensive.
