Voters in Austin decide to keep airport location

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Voters decided against moving the city's airport and approved creation of a new transit authority during a citywide election that attracted 29 percent of the registered voters.

The decision on whether to move Austin's Robert Mueller Municipal Airport was split throughout the evening Saturday but the final tally showed 40,139 votes against the airport move and 39,391 votes for moving it.

Pike Powers, chairman of the airport task force which recommended moving the airport, had predicted the race would be extremely close.

The creation of the Capital Metropolitan Transportation Authority in Austin passed overwhelmingly with 46,059 votes opposed to 32,413 votes.

Several incorporated cities outside of Austin voted against the authority but the city of Austin was the critical point in the proposal's passage.

The tables turned on whether or not to move the airport throughout the evening and early morning, sometimes being only 15 votes apart.

"The people finally decided," said John Cutwright, a member of the task force who led the opposition for the airport move. "I hope the land speculators and city council will listen to the people."

He said a parking garage and noise abatement procedures are first on the agenda to improve the present airport. Voluntary noise abatement procedures are in effect now, but Cutwright hopes to institute mandatory procedures.

The airport task force had projected the new airport to cost $353 million. The present airport was estimated to sell for $200 million and another $60 million was to be sought in federal aid, the task force said. The additional $93 million needed was to be financed through revenue bonds, to be repaid out of airport revenues.

Proponents of the airport move listed noise elimination, safety concerns around the airport and air-space conflicts with nearby Bergstrom Air Force Base as reasons for the move.

The new airport was to be located at an unspecified location outside the city. The plan was to purchase 5,300 acres of land and have land use controls of an additional 10,000 acres surrounding the new location.

The other major issue of the 20 propositions decided on Saturday concerned the development of the Capital Metropolitan Transportation Authority which will serve Travis and southern Williamson County.

The new authority will take over the present city bus system and plan for possible light rail trolley lines or other high-capacity transit service to meet Austin's growing needs.

Alan C. Wulkan, executive director of Capital Metro, said, "We had sensed all along that we were being favorably received because traffic is clearly the number one issue in Austin."

Wulkan said the first steps for the new authority are arranging for an additional 1 cent sales tax to fund the project and negotiate a transfer of authority from the current bus system.

He said Capital Metro, which will have more than a $40 million budget, will begin its new service in July.

Opponents of the proposal said the number of commuters which use public transportation are too few for such a large expenditure.

"Wow, you must have been to the Caribbean!" Perfect Tan Comes To College Station.

The middle of winter is not when most people think of getting a tan, but area residents will have to change their way of thinking with the arrival of Perfect Tan. Perfect Tan is a new state-of-the-art, European-style tanning salon that lets you keep a healthy, golden tan all year long.

Nothing can boost your self-image like a rich, natural tan. A beautiful tan is one of today's symbols of health and success. Because a good tan makes you look better, it also makes you feel better. Just imagine yourself at that first spring party already showing off a glowing tan! Perfect Tan makes it easy.

Tanning salons have become extremely popular in such Texas cities as Dallas, Austin, and San Antonio. Perfect Tan owners Charles and Ann Teague are sure indoor tanning will be just as popular here when people begin learning about its convenience and safety.

"Perfect Tan uses exclusively Solaire beds, the most technologically advanced equipment available," explains Charles Teague. They virtually eliminate the ultra-violet B (UV-B) rays of light that can burn the skin, while they enhance the UV-A light which gently tans. Therefore, Solaire beds are actually safer than sunshine, but tan you much faster.

The result is a deep, lasting tan that actually softens normal skin and may help relieve some skin problems like acne. A thirty-minute session at Perfect Tan is equal to three to five hours in the sun, and there is no risk of burning because trained technicians regulate your time in the tanning beds. The Teagues guarantee that anyone, no matter how fair-skinned, can safely get a rich, natural tan from a sensibly planned series of visits.

You are sure to enjoy every session at Perfect Tan. The salon is attractively decorated in soft colors accented by warm brass. Each tanning room is completely private with a Solaire bed, a chair, and a storage area for your clothes and other belongings. Restrooms and a powder room are also available for your convenience.

For working persons, convenience is one of the best reasons for tanning at Perfect Tan. Because tanning sessions are primarily by appointment, Perfect Tan will fit their schedule to yours. You can make appointments before or after work or even during your lunch hour, because you never have to sweat or exert yourself. You can relax by listening to the built-in AM-FM stereo cassette system or just nap while the Solaire bed tans both sides of your body at the same time.

The convenience of indoor tanning appeals to all types of people. Whole families can protect themselves from sunburn by getting a tan before a tropical vacation or ski trip. Students and faculty alike enjoy preparing for Spring Break at the beach. Perfect Tan means never having to wait for the sun to shine to get the look of health and success.

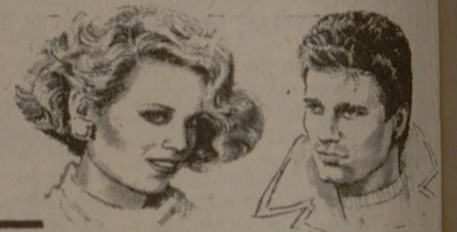

The successful glow of a beautiful tan is surprisingly economical. Perfect Tan has a variety of payment plans. Your first visit is complimentary between now and February 1. After that you can pay for individual sessions or purchase an even better package deal. A tanning package also makes a great gift.

There is no excuse for not shedding the 'blah' of a pale, winter complexion. Just stop by Perfect Tan in the Post Oak Square near Mariel's Supermarket, or call 764-2771 to arrange for your free initial session.
