San Antonio musicians strike continues in a stalemate

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — The San Antonio symphony strike entered its third week Monday with no plans for a bargaining session to end the stalemate.

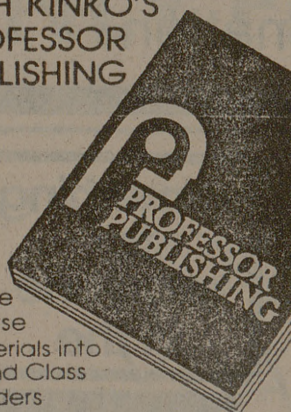

The 83-member orchestra went on strike Jan. 5, demanding higher salaries and financial parity with other major orchestras in the United States.

Carlos Wilson, symphony managing director said he is hearing rumors the symphony may be in for a lengthy strike.

The union, claiming too much of the symphony's budget goes for administration, has asked for raises in all three years of the proposed contract.
