Seminar offering students advice on acquiring jobs

By CATHIE ANDERSON
Staff Writer

Students not only learn how to get a job, but also how to keep one when they attend the Carl Stevens Professional Development and Selling Seminar, said Dr. Howard Hesby, the sponsor for the National Agricultural Marketing Association.

The 16-hour seminar will be held for the fifth consecutive year at Texas A&M Friday through Sunday. The fee for the seminar is $40 in advance but $45 at the door and includes the cost of a workbook.

Stevens normally conducts his seminars at a cost of $595, but the Texas A&M seminar is sponsored in part by the Society of Texas A&M Mothers Clubs, the National Agricultural Marketing Association and the Society of Entrepreneurship and New Ventures.

Ralph Carpenter, assistant director of media relations at A&M, said the seminar teaches people how to better display what they're trying to sell, which is, in many cases, themselves. Carpenter attended a Stevens seminar put on for the Athletic Department.

John Robison, president of the Society of Entrepreneurship and New Ventures, said that Stevens' seminar would help students learn to better deal with both peers and bosses.

"If you talk to people that make it to the top, half of them will say that they got there because of the way they presented themselves or their ideas," Robison said.

Registration will take place in 115 Kleberg Animal and Food Science Center from noon to 1 p.m. Friday, and the seminar begins at 1 p.m.

"Students go through at least 132 hours during their college careers, but they never get the kind of training that Carl Stevens will give them," Hesby said.

"The sad thing about this (course) is that you (the student) don't know you need it," Hesby said. "Students become so interested in getting credits that they don't understand the benefits of a seminar that they have to pay for."

Homero Recio, a lecturer in the Department of Animal Sciences, participated in the seminar last year. He said that he uses the Stevens' format for speeches when giving lectures in animal science classes or speeches across the state.

Stevens is "a live wire," a dynamic individual who presents his material in an interesting and informative manner, Carpenter said.

Stevens served 13 years as a professor and a visiting lecturer at colleges and universities throughout the United States. He has also co-authored two college textbooks, "Selling" and "Agriselling."

Stevens also has conducted seminars for corporations including International Business Machines Corp. and Campbell's Soup.

CS council meets tonight

The mayor will sign a proclamation designating the week of Feb. 10-16 as "United States Jaycee Women Week" at a regular meeting of the College Station City Council at 7:00 p.m.

Other business will include a public hearing on amending the city's sign ordinance to regulate the location, height and area of signs.

A starting date for the ordinance will also be decided. The Council will also consider an agreement with the State of Texas in assuming control, maintenance, supervision and regulation of certain state highways within College Station city limits.

The meeting will be held in the College Station Community Center on Jersey Street.

a unique opportunity for Agriculturalists

For you and the world itself. You can put your AGRICULTURE DEGREE or FARMING EXPERIENCE to work at a challenging, demanding and unique opportunity. You'll be meeting new people, learning a new language, experiencing a new culture and gaining a whole new outlook on your future career or retirement. And while you are building your future you'll help people in developing countries by sharing your skills in crop or livestock production, bookkeeping, soil management, equipment care, agribusines or other capabilities necessary for food production. The financial rewards may not be great, but as a Peace Corps volunteer, your opportunity for growth is certain.
