A&M to compete with business' best

By REBECCA ADAIR Reporter

Many people may wonder what it's like to make policy decisions for a major corporation, but five Texas A&M business students will be given

These students will participate in a case-study competition designed for top-ranked undergraduate busi-ness students — the fourth annual McIntire Commerce Invitational (MCI-IV). The three-day competion will be Feb. 7-10 at the University of Virginia.

Dr. Robert E. Hoskisson, assistant professor of management, will act as faculty advisor for the first A&M team to compete in the tournament. The team comprises Diane Baumbach, Renell Carter, Stephen Schwarzbach, Jeffrey Early and alternate, Michelle Weishaar. All are senior business majors.

The team members were nominated and chosen by the College of Business Administration Fellows from the business administration honor students, Hoskisson said.

Students are preparing for the competition by visiting a Masters of Business Administration class and by practicing case presentations before the MBA class. This competition is the only undergraduate business case competition in the nation. Each year five schools are invited to com-

Schools competing this year are A&M, the University of Florida-Gainesville, the University of Illinois, the University of Minnesota, and defending champion, the University of

The policy case given to the competitors, written by the McIntire School of Commerce faculty members, is based on an actual company. The faculty members meet with the cooperating organization and compile the necessary data.

Case topics range from handling high growth situations to making decisions about the future of a company's operations.

Once the competition begins, the team is given 15 hours to analyze the case and prepare a five to six page written solution and an oral defense. The team must then face a 30-minute question-and-answer session.
The winning team returns the following year to defend its title.

Judging is done by a panel of prominent members of the business community and a representative from The General Electric Foundation, the competition's sponsor

Funded through a grant from the foundation, the competition is planned and managed entirely by students during the course of a year. The major objectives of the competition, the competition's chairman said, are: "to create a national show-case for bachelor degree candidates in business from among the nation's finest undergraduate programs; to arouse industry and media awareness of the importance of bachelor degree candidates in business; and to provide an opportunity for both participants and their schools to gain national exposure and to benefit from contact with other undergraduates from around the nation.

Pesticide damages cotton crops in Texas

Associated Press

AMARILLO - The Texas Department of Agriculture said Thursday it is seeking a record $24,250 in fines from 38 pesticide applicators and dealers for damage to cotton crops in Deaf Smith, Parmer and Castro counties.

Ron White, assistant TDA commissioner, told a news conference that the High Plains cotton suffered damage last summer after it was in- cotton advertently exposed to the herbicide

Names of the alleged violators of state pesticide laws were not re-leased. The TDA said some of them have not yet received the official let-

White said 2,4-D is intended for use on grain crops to kill weeds and is strickly prohibited from use near
