Flutie doesn't see beyond green bills

Do you remember the old saying, "Money isn't everything?" Doug Flutie apparently doesn't or hasn't ever heard it before.

The Heisman Trophy winner from Boston College announced Friday he will sign a multi-million dollar contract with the United States Football League's New Jersey Generals.

The contract, believed to be worth at least $7 million over at least five years, could make him the highest-paid pro football player and the highest-paid rookie in any sport.

It also means he has spurned the established National Football League for the USFL, which is in only its third season.

Flutie might be seeing dollar signs now, but he better invest wisely for the future. He can't afford to make another dumb decision.

The USFL is suffering serious financial problems.

The Chicago Blitz were taken over by the league after no one could afford to own them. Several teams have folded and others have combined. Commissioner Chet Simmons bailed out two weeks ago.

The Los Angeles Express had such financial difficulties last year that quarterback Steve Young, who was the league's top paid player, almost got out of his contract because the team couldn't afford to pay him.

Flutie will be playing for one of the richest men in the country, Generals' owner Donald Trump. Trump won't have any problems paying Flutie.

Considering the league's dollars and cents situation, will Flutie's team have anyone left to play?

Probably not after this season. This season, which begins Feb. 24, will be the last spring football for the USFL. After sitting out a entire year, the USFL will move its season into head-to-head competition with the NFL in the fall of '86.

Can a player come back after not playing for one year? Inactivity has ended many careers and it could mean the end for a few USFL players.

Going head-to-head with the NFL brings up another important point, which Flutie should have considered but apparently didn't — image.

Flutie was an American hero. He had perhaps the biggest following since former Dallas Cowboy quarterback Roger Staubach entered the Navy.

Mothers told their daughters to find a husband like clean-cut, wholesome Flutie. Daughters drooled that they would love to do just that. Fathers dreamed of having a son just like Flutie and sons dreamed of being Flutie.

But how quickly things can change.

Have you ever seen a USFL player endorse anything?

Endorsements, Mr. Flutie, bring in not only money but prestige.

Two former Heisman winners are learning that lesson right now. The winner of the '82 award, running back Hershel Walker, also plays for the Generals. Even though he has gained his share of yards, Walker is not even mentioned in the same breath with the NFL's premier backs.

And the '83 winner? He's trying to find a team who will take him.

Mike Rozier played for the Pittsburgh Maulers last year. The team went bankrupt and the Baltimore Stars won the rights to his services. The Stars didn't want Rozier and the NFL team who has control of his rights, the Houston Oilers, got tired of negotiating and now they don't want him either.

Trump said, "Having Doug Flutie will be fabulous not only for the Generals, but for their fans."

What fans? Flutie will be learning a hard but fast lesson — money isn't everything.

Mustangs fall victim to weekend's upsets

Associated Press

The upset fever sweeping collegiate basketball killed off the No. 2 ranked Southern Methodist Mustangs.

Texas Tech ambushed the Mustangs 64-63 in a Southwest Conference game on a Saturday in which top-ranked Georgetown was bumped off by St. John's, also by a point.

It was SMU's first loss on the mainland after having fallen to Chamade in Hawaii on Christmas Day.

"This is probably the biggest win we've had," said Tech Coach Gerald Myers. "On the other hand it's too bad SMU wasn't playing someone else so I could pull for them."

"With Georgetown getting beat they might have had a chance to be No. 1. They've done a lot for our conference and have been great representatives for the SWC. I'm sure they'll still be a force to reckon with this season," Myers said.

Texas Tech's Tony Benford 10-foot baseline jumper with three seconds left was the Pony killer.

SMU Coach Dave Bliss was philosophical about the loss.

"It's difficult to go undefeated on the road and have everything go your way," said Bliss. "We had our chances and missed some free throws at the end. We had our opportunities."

"It was a typical road game." The Mustangs had to play the final 6:48 without starting center Jon Koncak who fouled out with only six points.

"We made some foolish fouls but still could have won if we hit all our free throws," said Bliss.

Myers said, "Our guys had it won, lost it, then came back and won it and that's the important thing."

Tech blew an 11-point lead but came back at the end on Benford's critical bucket.

Myers said, "This definitely has to be one of the greatest victories since we've been here but the importance of the game will be determined by how we use it down the line."

He added, "Bubba Jennings played a great game. We did a good job on stopping Koncak inside."

The defeat was the first in SWC play for the Mustangs against six victories. It was only their second loss of the season with 15 victories.

Jennings had a game-high 26 points for SMU and Larry Davis had 25 points for SMU.

Jennings hit 13 of 18 shots for the Red Raiders to score a game-high 26 points as a sellout crowd of 8,174 jammed Lubbock Municipal Coliseum, watching Tech increase its SWC record to 5-2. The Raiders are 12-5 for the season.

"It was a great win against a super team," said Jennings. "This is the kind of win you think about when you first start playing basketball. I was hot and some of the shots I took
