protect academic programs and research.

"There's no sense in hand-wringing," Hansen said. "We'll have to assume we can't escape the cuts."

Dr. Percy Pierre, president of Prairie View A&M University, said the LBB's suggested $4 million in cuts from programs under the Texas Desegregation Plan will harm that university's chances of meeting the goals of the Plan.

The Texas Plan calls for improved degree programs, including six new degree programs, and recruitment of more white students at predominantly black Prairie View A&M.

The LBB in December proposed reducing the Plan's funding from $6 million for 1983-85 to $2 million for 1985-87. Pierre said the university would need "at least $2 million more" to meet the program's goals.

"We need restoration of special item funding," Pierre said. "Do you really want to eliminate the strides that have been made to increase opportunities for minorities in this state?"

The University of Texas System in November pledged to pay Prairie View $10 million a year out of its two-thirds of the Available University Fund.

The Board adopted a resolution to give Prairie View its fair share of the AUF funding. This would be at least the amount contributed by the U.T. System.

But Pierre said money to keep the programs outlined by the plan should not come from the AUF. Those funds, he said, are necessary to make Prairie View a university of "the first class."

In other business, the Board approved the establishment of three new centers:

- The Space Research Center, recommended by the Committee for Service Units, will be part of the Texas Engineering Experiment Station. Established under an agreement with the National Aeronautic and Space Administration, its purpose is to develop the nation's leading university-based space research program.

- The Principals' Center, recommended by the Committee for Academic Campuses, will be part of the College of Education. Its mission is to provide better training for future principals.

- The Center for International Business Studies, also recommended by the Committee for Academic Campuses, will teach students to work in exporting industries. It will be a focal point for University research in international business.

The Board also granted the title of Professor Emeritus to three retired A&M professors. Dr. Clare A. Gunn, Dr. Clive R. Harston and Dr. Robert D. Powell taught in the College of Agriculture. Dr. Theodore Noyes, an associate professor in the College of Engineering, also was named Professor Emeritus.
