

STATE AND LOCAL

Tuition

But Rep. Richard Smith, R-College Station, said any plan that indexed the cost of tuition would be unacceptable.

"I would categorically reject any bill that indexes the year-to-year cost of educating students," he said. "I don't like indexing or any other automatic adjustment because it takes the decision making process out of the hands of the legislature. It takes away the ability of the legislature to judge on a case-by-case basis."

Smith said he would vote against any bill that would raise in-state tuition but approves of raising the tuition of non-resident students.

"I think we should raise out-of-state tuition, but more important than that, we should get rid of the exemptions that allow non-residents to pay resident tuition," he said. "If the state got rid of these exemptions, it could pick up an extra $2 to $3 million per year."

Smith said out-of-state students might be discouraged from coming to a Texas university but insists the quality of a school and its programs should be the reason for coming to Texas and not the low tuition.

Library

Saito said: "We have reason to believe a vengeful employee from DataPhase, our vendor based in Shawnee Mission, Kan., tampered with the system because he was angered by recent employee terminations."

DataPhase supplies the library with hardware, software and necessary information.

He said the hacker attempted to create an additional library within the present library data file.

Hoadley said the problem has caused long lines in the circulation department and confusion in the reference department. Four CRTs are currently functional and are being shared among the departments that need them the most.

Hoadley said library personnel have not faced any severe criticism from patrons.

"Our problem here is not unusual, but it does not happen frequently," she said. "I am thankful for the positive attitudes of the students and faculty who have to manually look up information in card catalogs and wait in line."

Saito said the library computer has experienced a head crash before but this was the first time they have had a security breach.

Saito said A&M was not alone in the computer crime. He cited several institutions in Florida as targets also.

"We just changed our password and informed the vendor of the change a few months ago," Saito said. "The vendor employees and a few other people beside myself know this password."

This secrecy is the reason DataPhase employees are suspected, he said.

Saito and Hoadley said the library will operate in full capacity Thursday and the book limit will be lifted.

"We have a contract with DataPhase now," Saito said, "so we are not sure what vendor we will use in the future. We are not ruling out any possibilities."

He said this was a once-in-a-lifetime occurrence.

"We stopped our inquiries to DataPhase about the incident," Saito said, "because we feel it's all water under the bridge now."

"We have a position to keep and the company has a position to keep. This is a bit different than the typical computer-hacking case where the hacker leaves his signature. This hacker left his signature in the nature of the crime he committed."

Doctors

When tests such as amniocentesis and ultrasound scanning reveal a severe deformity, the decision to abort is just as difficult, Murray says.

But, of all the improvements in medical care, one of the most striking is the decline of abortion-related deaths. In 1960, 10 women died from abortion-related deaths for every one million women who had abortions, while only 0.3 deaths were reported per million abortions in 1980.

There are four major procedures used in abortions:

- Suction Curettage — Generally considered the safest method. It requires a local anesthetic and recovery takes a few hours. A series of metal rods, each slightly larger than the last, is used to gradually open the womb. A small plastic tube is inserted, the fetus is removed by suction with a vacuum aspirator and small instruments called curettes are used to scrape the lining of the uterus. Primarily used between 7 and 13 weeks of pregnancy.

- Dilatation and Curettage — The most common procedure. It requires a general anesthetic. Dilators open the entrance of the womb and curettes, small spoon-shaped instruments, scrape the uterine wall removing all fetal material. Primarily used between 13 and 15 weeks of pregnancy.

- Prostaglandin — Rarely used except in second trimester abortions. A product originally made from male and female hormones, but now chemically synthesized. The product is inserted into the vagina as a suppository or into the amniotic sac through a needle. Generally used between 12 and 24 weeks of pregnancy.

- Saline and Urea Injections — Some fluid from the amniotic sac is withdrawn and replaced with saline or urea. The fetus dies and is expelled when contractions begin. Generally used between 13 and 24 weeks.

"CASABLANCA" HAD BOGEY, "RIO BRAVO" HAD THE DUKE, AND THE SURVIVAL GAME HAS ME.

They were my heroes. Those macho, good-guys who talked slow, shot straight, and left broken-hearted women in their wake. My question is where'd they all go?

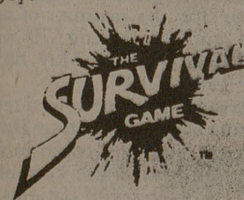

My answer is the Survival Game.

You've heard of America's Outdoor adventure game, I'm sure. It's gotten about as much media as the L.A.

Olympics! That's because it's the only place red-blooded Americans can go to have a real adventure.

I mean, I'm a desk jockey at a brokerage all week long. Come Saturday, though, I'm in the woods, sneaking, running, escaping, attacking... and grabbing glory. I'm the hero!

Except for last Saturday. That's when I was hit by a woman's paint pellet. A woman shot it. Sorry Bogey.
