Halbouty endows largest chair ever from an individual

University News Service

Michel T. Halbouty is now the donor of the largest individually endowed academic chair at Texas A&M, with the announcement that he has increased his endowment in geology to $1.1 million.

The Michel T. Halbouty Chair, originally endowed in 1981 with $500,000 from the internationally prominent Houston earth scientist and engineer, is held by Dr. Robert R. Berg, widely acclaimed geologist and former president of the American Institute of Professional Geologists. The announcement of Halbouty's new gift came during the dedication of a $7.1 million expansion of the Michel T. Halbouty Geosciences Building.

"The increase in the chair to $1.1 million identified it as one of the most outstanding chairs in geology in the United States," Halbouty said. "And it will afford Texas A&M the opportunity for expanded geological research. It will also assist the College of Geosciences to maintain its standard of excellence."

Halbouty is a 1930 graduate of Texas A&M and has been designated one of the University's distinguished alumni.

Jack M. Rains, president of 3/D International and a 1960 Texas A&M graduate, said he first heard of Halbouty in the 1950s when he arrived at Texas A&M.

"He was a legend then and has always been one of my heroes," Rains said.

Rains told a story of Halbouty's first days at Texas A&M as a freshman when he was $50 short of funds to register.

"He kept hearing everybody say 'Prexy Walton did this and Prexy Walton does that,' so Halbouty decided to find this person to see if he could help. Not knowing that 'Prexy' was a nickname for, president, Halbouty went to Prexy Walton's secretary and told her his story. President Walton heard the young man and ended up lending Halbouty the $50 out of his pocket.

"I submit that was the best investment Texas A&M ever made," Rains said.

Halbouty earned his bachelor's and master's degrees in engineering at Texas A&M before earning a doctorate of engineering from Montana College of Mineral Science and Technology. A staunch supporter of his alma mater since graduation, Halbouty's generosity includes the giving of two scholarships in geology and petroleum engineering each year for more than 35 years and the funding of a President's Endowed Scholarship.

Halbouty has received numerous honors including the Hoover Medal for engineering excellence and public service from the American Association of Engineering Societies, the Geosciences and Earth Resources Medal for Distinguished Achievement and the American Association of Petroleum Geologists' President's Award for his special publication, "Giant Oil and Gas Fields of the Decade 1968-1978."

He has presented his personal papers, reflecting an illustrious career and involvement in worldwide energy matters, to Texas A&M's Sterling C. Evans Library.

"Mike's love for Texas A&M began as a student on campus and has grown every year since," said Dr. Robert Walker, vice president for development. "He is very generous with his time and his resources and his interest in anything for the good of Texas A&M."

Dean Mel Friedman said that with the new 40,000-square-foot Halbouty addition and the renovation of the older wing, the College of Geosciences at Texas A&M will have facilities for teaching and research that are second to none in the nation.
