A&M needs SMU victory to get SWC tourney bid

By CHAREAN WILLIAMS
Assistant Sports Editor

For Texas A&M Head Coach Lynn Hickey, tonight's game against SMU at Moody Coliseum will be the biggest of her short career at A&M.

Hickey has certainly coached in bigger games. Her Kansas State team was ranked in the Top 10 last season. And she will certainly coach in bigger games at A&M before she's through.

However, those NCAA championship games are down the road. For this year's six Aggie seniors, SMU may be the last big game of their career.

Why their last big game? Because if the Aggies lose, they will probably not advance to the Southwest Conference tournament.

The top six teams in the SWC advance to the tournament. A&M is currently seventh and a win over SMU puts them in sixth — simple as that.

"It is a very big game," Hickey said. "SMU lost to Baylor Monday night, so if we beat SMU we will have a chance to move up to sixth place. We will have to count on some big upsets if we don't."

Hickey said beating SMU won't be an easy task. The Aggies lost to SMU earlier this year.

"They're a scrappy team," Hickey said. "They have a good inside game. The biggest difficulty we face is the way they change defenses."

"It makes it difficult for us because we have a different offense for every defense. We may have to compromise and just run one offense."

Hickey said the Mustangs and Aggies are evenly matched.

"The team that makes the fewest number of mistakes will win the game," Hickey said. "We have a good chance to win, but we have to have a good game as a team."

The Aggies will look inside more than they did in their first loss to SMU.

"Michell (Tatum) wasn't in the earlier game," Hickey said. "That should give us a bigger threat this time. They don't have as good an outside game, so I look for Jenni (Edgar) and Lisa (Langston) to have a big game. We hope they can get open better than they have been."

Center Ann Trinka who has been an inside force for the Aggs of late, will get the starting nod against the Mustangs.

"She's come in and done well," Hickey said. "She's generally not a scoring threat, but she is going to have games when she scores in double figures."

"We like to have her on the floor because she's a great leader. She really talks when she's out on the court."

However, Hickey said if the Mustangs' press begins to hurt the Aggs she will not hesitate to bring in a smaller lineup.

"If their press becomes a big factor, we may have to go with a smaller lineup," Hickey said. "We will let the situation dictate what we do. We have been playing no more than seven people per game, so we have been consistent there."

The biggest game of Hickey's first year and several Aggie's last year has arrived.

Sutton isn't planning pro career

Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Eddie Sutton says he is staying at the University of Arkansas as basketball coach and that a statement he made about frustrations with college recruiting was an off-the-cuff remark.

"I'm not going anywhere," Sutton said in response to a Dallas-dated story. In that article, he said, "It's frustrating. I know people are winning because they're doing things illegally."

At a news conference Tuesday, he said, "I am not going to the pros. My comment in talking to a writer in Dallas was, 'Sometimes a few of us get frustrated having to compete against those who are cheating and maybe that's what will drive me to the pros.'"

"I have not talked to anybody in pro basketball. I'm not interested in coaching in pro basketball."
