Recruiting

Texas' best prospect heads north of Red River

Associated Press

BAY CITY — Hart Lee Dykes, the elusive, glue-fingered blue chip wide receiver from Bay City, did an about-face Wednesday and signed a national football letter of intent with Oklahoma State after he was rumored headed for either Illinois or Oklahoma.

Dykes, the most actively recruited schoolboy in Texas this year, signed with the Cowboys although he never made an official visit to the Cowboy campus.

"I had told them no but they kept calling me anyway," Dykes said shortly after ending the intense recruiting campaign for his services. "They talked to me and said how much they'd enjoyed recruiting me. "They seemed more interested in me as a person first and then as an athlete and that really touched my heart. I just felt they were more honest with me."

Dykes did not make an official visit to the Oklahoma State campus at Stillwater, but on a visit to his brother Todd Chambers' home in Enid drove to visit the school.

The first tip off that Dykes was reconsidering the Cowboys came early Wednesday when he said Texas A&M was no longer on his list and that Oklahoma State was again being considered.

Illinois was believed to have the inside track on signing Dykes because of the school's emphasis on passing attack, one of Dykes' requirements.

"Illinois was nice but it's pretty far away from home," Dykes said. "I know they don't throw the much there but the position is open and I think I'll get a chance to play."

Dykes caught 94 passes during his career at Bay City and last season was a first team all-state player as a wide receiver and safety.

"I made my decision a couple of hours ago but I just now feel relief now that I've announced it," Dykes said.

who came out of nowhere and made it."

Greene may just be the player who comes out of obscurity and makes it big in college.

Besides rushing for 2,885 yards last season, Greene scored 40 touchdowns. He was voted All-State the last two seasons and was named Player of the Year by the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal and television station KAMC.

Greene's 90 career touchdowns, 349-yard game and 2,885 yard season all rank in the Top 10 in Texas history.

Another Lafayette, La. prospect could make it big as an Aggie running back.

Acadiana High School tailback Troy Jones was the leading rusher in the state with 1,856 yards.

The three tight ends signed by A&M will probably take over in the

'86 season, when the Aggie tight end corps thin out.

Brian Ross caught 18 passes for 275 yards last season for San Angelo (Central). He was named to the Houston Post and Dallas Morning News teams.

Broadmoor High School in Baton Rouge gave A&M Cannon, drafted No. 1 by the Dallas Cowboys last season. That tie gave the Aggies a tight end prospect.

Voted to the state's Top 22 list, Wally Hartley caught 41 passes last season for 586 yards. Hartley could play defensive end, although he was recruited as a tight end.

The Aggies only signed 21 players because of the 95 player restriction.

According to NCAA rules, a team can sign as many as 30 players in a season, but cannot have more than 95 players on scholarship. Most of the A&M players are expected to return next season, so that curtailed the number of prospects Sherrill could sign.

"We only visited 65 schools," Sherrill said. "We did not make commitments early. We limited ourselves to a certain number of schools. A lot of players who aren't highly touted out of school."

Sherrill seemed extremely pleased with the academic quality of the recruits.

"There's five players in here who are going to major in engineering," he said. "That narrows out the right away. Webb will probably be a valedictorian of his class. He's a 3.5 grade point."

It seems the Aggies got some prospects out of the shallow high school talent in 1985. The verdict won't be returned until the end of the year.

As Sherrill himself said, "Dame has had some of the best recruiting over the last ten years that doesn't have anything to do with winning and losing."

Kansas players to out-of-state schools by signing two members of The Associated Press' Super Team, Helena lineman Freddie Childress, 6-4, 295, and Pocahontas lineman LeShon Browne, 6-2, 235.

The Texas Longhorns signed Ed Cunningham, a 6-8, 260 defensive tackle from Sanford-Fritsch. Cunningham had earlier given a verbal commitment to Texas.

Lubbock Dunbar blue chip tight end Sam Collins signed with the Baylor Bears.

SWC co-champion Houston picked up Galveston Ball running back Kimball Anders, 5-10, 200.

Delaney was the final blue chipper to come into the Horned Frog fold, making his decision late Tuesday.

"Jiles and I have been hooking up since the seventh grade," Delaney said. "I figured if we went to the same school and played to the best of our abilities, we could win a championship there."

Dykes, a superbly gifted athlete, caught 94 passes during three varsity seasons at Black Cats. He earned all-state honors as a wide receiver in his senior season and was a double first all-stater as a senior at wide receiver and safety.
