Poor foul shooting drives TCU 'Nutts'

By CHAREAN WILLIAMS
 Assistant Sports Editor

Texas Christian's inability to shoot free throws in the first half was the key to Texas A&M's 67-60 victory Saturday night.

"Our biggest problem was that we didn't hit our free throws in the first half," said TCU Coach Jim Killingsworth. "If we would have converted on those we would have been in good shape."

The Horned Frogs hit only seven of 14 free throws during the first half.

That was the ball game in a "Nutt" shell. To bad TCU doesn't have five Dennis Nutts on the court.

The TCU guard made four-of-four free throws in the first half and eight-of-eight on the night.

Nutt edged ahead of A&M's Kenny Brown for the Southwest Conference free throw shooting title Wednesday night. With his spectacular display at the line Saturday, the Little Rock, Ark. senior has now hit 67 of 72 for 93 percent.

So, what's your secret, Dennis? "I just take my time," Nutt said. "I shoot the same way every time I go to the line. I don't ever change my style."

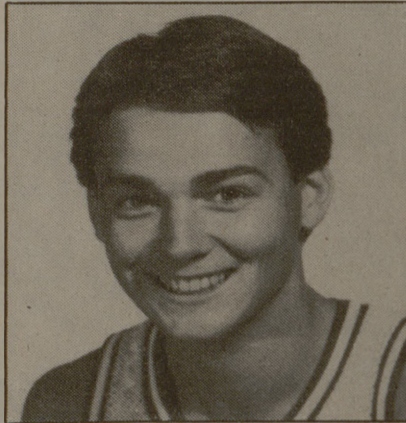

Last season was a different story for Nutt. He only made 76.6 percent of his foul shots, far below his usual standards.

"I shot a lot more at the line my junior year," Nutt said. "I was not real confident at the line and that affected my shooting."

"This season I just shot a lot more free throws in practice and really got my rhythm going. That really gave me a lot more confidence."

The Horned Frog leader, whose faces reminds one of Spanky on L'il Rascals, decided to attend TCU after an outstanding career at Little Rock's Central High School, where he was All-State in both basketball and football.

TCU: Why not Arkansas? "I knew Coach Killingsworth," Nutt said. "He coached my brothers at OSU (Oklahoma State). TCU had a scholarship open so he asked me to come down and give it a shot."

Speaking of Nutt's family, Dennis grew up in an athletic home.

His father Houston and his brothers Houston and Dickey were basketball standouts at Oklahoma State. Dennis' brother, Danny, plays basketball and football at Arkansas.

Dennis, that's the TCU Nutt, ranked third in the SWC in scoring last season, averaging 17.5 points per game. This season, his average has jumped to 18.9.

The All-SWC candidate hopes this won't be his last season on the hardwood.

"I really don't know what the future holds right now," Nutt said. "I would like to give pro ball a chance. If not, I will try to find another league. I hope this won't be my last season. I love the game too much to give it up."

For the remainder of the current season, Nutt is preparing for the SWC tournament.

"We don't feel real good about this loss, but we're not down," Nutt said. "We've still got the (SWC) tournament ahead. We're really looking forward to that."

tribute. I was ready for a chance to play."

Sweargin stayed on the floor for 12 minutes. In that span, she scored four points, had two rebounds, dished out one assist and got two steals.

For the Lincoln, Mo. senior, the playing time has been few and far between this year. Sweargin started for the Ags last season.

"I kinda missed the feeling," Sweargin said. "I lost my confidence a long time ago. I don't know what it was, but this game sure helped me get it back."

Perhaps the biggest contribution of the Ags' bench didn't even show up in the box score. TCU couldn't handle A&M's full-court pressure in the second half and that proved to be the biggest difference in the game.

Beth Young, Sweargin and Bennett flustered TCU much of the second half by applying aggressive back court pressure.

Add to that a 24-2 Aggie scoring run early in the half and its easy to see how the blowout came about.

"When you get me and Beth out on the court together, it's a different game," Sweargin said. "We play well together. We really go after the person with the ball."

"They (TCU) were playing their usual style. When (Hickey) had me and Beth out there, it kind of snapped it. We turned the game into a quicker game and they couldn't handle it."

TCU Coach Frances Garmon wasn't sure why her team fell apart in the second half.

"We went from smelling like a rose to stinking up the gym," Garmon said. "I couldn't be prouder with the first half. We lost our concentration the second half. I just don't know what the problem was. Maybe we can't handle being ahead."
