China, U.S. trade builds relations: SCONA speaker

By JAY BLINDERMAN
Reporter

Trade relations provide an opportunity for the United States to expand business and build a strong and lasting relationship with China, an executive with Hughes Tool Co. said Friday morning during SCONA.

Calvin Sholtess, executive vice president of Hughes Tool Co., said that relationship, however, must be built with patience and relations must be expanded to their full potential.

"If you consider trade in China a big, ripe plum ready to be picked, I am confident you are most likely to not taste it until the next crop," Sholtess said.

Sholtess is a member of the Council for Executive Development at Texas A&M and has been employed at Hughes Tool for 35 years. For 20 of those years, he has worked in international trade.

"The Chinese are the world's best traders and negotiators," he said. "They really do their homework."

The Chinese are honest in their business dealings and realize that they are behind in economic development, Sholtess said.

He also said the Chinese will have to develop roads and modern transportation systems to parallel economic production if they hope to meet their growth expectations.

If the Chinese can establish an equivalent standard of living, Sholtess said, the market in China will be four times as large as the market in the United States.

Just in the last five years, changes in dress habits towards more colorful and stylish clothing reflect a fresh outlook for the people of China, he said.

Sholtess said a company wanting to deal with China should be professional, persistent and most importantly, patient.

"Remember," he said, "the Chinese are the shrewdest traders in the world."

AT&T official to lecture in Chemistry Building

An AT&T Bell Laboratory official will discuss "Optical Communications" today at 4 p.m. in 231 Chemistry Building as part of the Robert A. Welch Foundation Lecture series.

Dr. Kenneth A. Jackson, head of the Optical Material Research Department at AT&T Bell Laboratories, will present the lecture.

The Robert A. Welch Foundation supports research in chemistry and physics. It annually sponsors university lectures concerning scientific research.

Jackson has done work in the fields of crystal growth and phase transformations and has received the Mathewson Gold Medal of the American Institute of Mechanical Engineers, said Dr. Michael Rosynek, associate head of the chemistry department.

Jackson's principal research interests are in the structure and properties of materials, both crystalline and amorphous, Rosynek said.

Jackson also has been president of both the American Association for Crystal Growth and the Materials Research Society.
