Artist

"Faceless America" tells of America's resources beginning to dry out. It's also representative of the minorities who for so many years were faceless.

"Family" represents Long's perception of the figureheads of the world. He shows the police, the military, the church, and a woman who is the most prominent figure in the painting. Longs believes the reason behind every man's actions, is the desire to please a woman, therefore it is women who really control the world.

But supporting the couch upon which they all sit, is a paint brush symbolizing the power of art over everyone.

Long was a 22-year-old marine before he ever met an artist and learned, to his surprise, that artists can make a living with art. He does special lectures for teenagers, so they can learn his lesson before they turn 22.

"I want to make sure that there's no young soul out there who aspires to be an artist that doesn't know that 'Yes, you can,' he said. "You can do anything you want to do in this world. Being an artist is one of the hardest, but you can do it, and it shouldn't be based on money. It should be based on what I tell everyone: I do art because I like doing it and because I know that's my role to play. And if I happen to make a million dollars, that'll be great, but that's not why I make art, to make money. I make art to make this world a better place." ¹
