Bush taking steps toward '88 race

Associated Press

WACO — Vice President George Bush has signaled his support for adopting an early presidential primary in Texas, saying it could give him an early boost over other Republican candidates in 1988.

The vice president said he conferred with friends and supporters, during a three-day tour through Texas that ended Saturday, about undertaking "a few prudent steps" for an expected 1988 presidential campaign.

"I haven't decided what I'm going to do in '88, but in terms of an early primary, I think that might be to my advantage," he said in an interview aboard Air Force Two with the Waco Tribune-Herald.

Bush also said he opposes splitting the presidential primary from the state primary in Texas because of the increased costs, which state officials have said could cost $8 million.

"Personally, politically and from a broad national standpoint, I would have nothing to fear from an early primary," Bush said. "In fact, you can make a case that it would be good."

"But the issue has been in this whole separation question, and I think that's bad. So I'm staying with the party leaders in this view, reserving the right to change my mind," he said.

In the interview on Friday, Bush said the first moves in what would be his second run for the presidency should begin in the next two months. But he said it is "too early" to make plans for formally announcing his candidacy.

But Bush said his supporters could take the first major campaign action by forming a fund-raising committee.

"What I may do is go with a political action committee that other people have mentioned," Bush said. "But ... you can't do it as a candidate or anything of that nature."
