2,456-acre tract donated

Conoco gives A&M gift

University News Service

Conoco, Inc. has given the Texas A&M System a 2,456-acre tract of Brazoria County land with an appraised value of $6.5 million — one of the largest such land gifts in the history of Texas.

Announcement of the gift was jointly made by Conoco and Texas A&M officials who will meet here Monday to commemorate the donation.

The Conoco delegation will be headed by Constantine S. Nicandros, president of worldwide petroleum operations. Joining Nicandros from Conoco will be Ozzie Newell Jr., executive vice president for manufacturing technology; Dan Cameron, vice president for worldwide refining coordination; and James R. Underhill, manager for business development for worldwide refining coordination.

Nicandros said the land given to the Texas A&M system was acquired by Conoco in 1975. It is located about 21 miles south and slightly east of Alvin and fronts on Chocolate Bayou.

"Conoco has many petroleum operations employees working around the world who are Texas A&M graduates," Nicandros said. "I learned from working with those men and women that this land is being placed into most capable hands."

Du Pont, Conoco's parent company, is one of the nation's top manufacturers of agricultural products, producing a complete line of crop protection chemicals. Research on many of these products is conducted by the company in Texas.

while tuition money must be sent to the state treasury.

Wasson said the Legislature authorizes all college and university fees, and that most of the fees are established for specific uses, such as student service fees. Much of the money is put into local funds, he said, but it is used according to specification. The current Appropriation Bill specifies funds that must be deposited in the State Treasury.

Bullock's report also said that "Thanks to local funds, 22 college presidents take home more pay than the Governor of Texas."

Wasson said the Appropriation

Bill allows using local funds to supplement state funds. This is essential in recruiting "high-quality individuals to the position of Chief Executive Officer of a major university." The amounts and sources of money are decided by the Board of Regents and reported to the secretary of state and the state comptroller.

until another location is found. That store will house the various computers offered through the program and provide demonstrations of both hardware and software products.

Vice Chancellor Bill Wasson is disappointed by the new location.

"We felt like we were doing something for the students," Wasson says, "but if the Student Government doesn't see it that way, then that's a decision they have to make. We will use this space (bookstore) now. It's not adequate, but it's not inconvenient for the students either."

University administrators had favored the Rumours site because it was close to the bookstore, located in a high-traffic area and the outside entrance would allow the center to operate when the MSC is closed.

Some students and MSC personnel objected to using space devoted to student activities for what he saw as an administrative function.

"There was a lot of discussion and concern expressed about the change," MSC Director Jim Reynolds says. "Right now we are operating under the assumption that Rumours is not being considered a site."

Wasson would not state location that are being discussed.

major, said graduate students should be taken into consideration when discussing possible new programs of concern to Student Government.

Candidates agreed the core curriculum, proposed by the Faculty Senate, shouldn't place a financial burden on students by adding more hours to the graduation requirements.

"As an engineering major," Stephan said, "I'm in a four-and-a-half year program and to increase the hours to graduate would be a folly."

Seat belt

Lyon felt the Senate would have given final approval Thursday, but Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, the presiding officer, misread Lyon's hand signal to proceed.

"I made a motion to go, and he thought I meant to hold it... so we'll pass it Monday," Lyon told reporters.

The Senate quickly adjourned until Monday after the bill was tentatively approved on voice vote.

The Senate on a 23-4 vote also adopted the "Big Bubba" amendment by Sen. Bill Sarpalis to extend the seat belt requirement to three-quarter ton pickups. The original bill covered only half-ton pickups.

Three other proposed amendments failed, including one on a 17-10 vote that automatically would abolish the proposed law if possible federal sanctions dissolved.

"You can buckle up right now," said Sen. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington, the amendment sponsor.

"No, you can't get 'em to unless you pass a law," responded Lyon.

The U.S. Department of Transportation has said it will require automakers to develop restraints such as air bags if states representing two-thirds of the country's population do not pass laws requiring seat belt use.

Lyon's bill would go into effect Sept. 1 but fines of $25 to $50 for violators would not become effective until Dec. 1.
