Thompson may join repeaters

Only five coaches have won consecutive titles

Associated Press

Georgetown Coach John Thompson added his name to a select coaching list last year when his Hoyas captured the national championship. Now, he is two victories from an even more exclusive grouping — the repeaters.

It was an 84-75 victory over Houston last March that gave Thompson the NCAA college basketball title after his team had come so close two years earlier, losing by one-point to North Carolina in the championship game.

"Winning the title was such a complete feeling, one of satisfaction," Thompson said before the start of the current season. "It was everything I thought it would be."

Considering the fact that (UCLA's) John Wooden won 10 and several other coaches have won more than one, there are very few people who have ever lived who can say they won a national championship.

Even fewer have repeated. Only UCLA and four other schools have successfully defended the title.

Thompson said before the season began that he wasn't thinking about repeating.

"Hey, we're going to defend the Big East first, then the national championship. We're going to take this step by step."

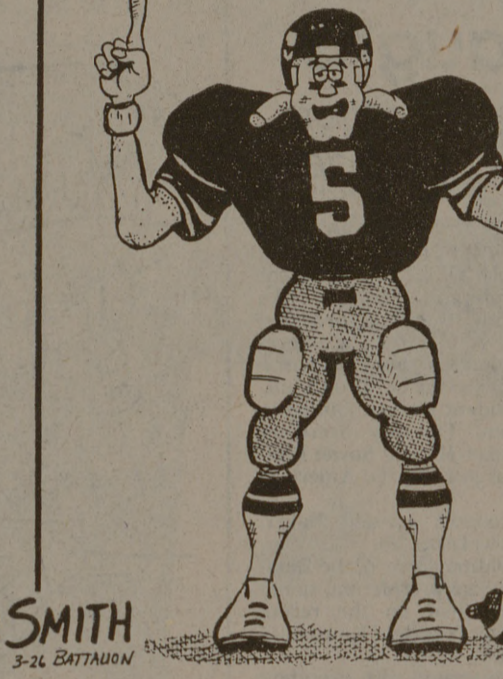

The Hoyas are stepping along nicely.

Led by 7-foot, All-American center Patrick Ewing, the Hoyas were the No. 1 team in the preseason poll.

SPRING OPTIMISM

FALL REALITY

They held the top spot until a one-point loss to St. John's snapped their 29-game winning streak. Within 48 hours Georgetown lost again, this time by two-points to Syracuse. They plummeted to second in the polls.

Thompson righted the Hoyas, who went on to win the Big East tournament, finish No. 1 in the final poll and received the top seeding in the East Regional.

The Hoyas four victories in the NCAA Tournament have been by a combined 60 points as only No. 6 Georgia Tech managed to come within 10 points, dropping a 60-54 decision Saturday.

What made the Yellow Jackets, who start two 7-footers, even tougher was the fact that Ewing missed 12 minutes of the second half because of foul trouble.

Still, the Hoyas prevailed.

Now, they must face No. 3 St. John's for the fourth time this season next Saturday in Lexington, Ky. in the semifinals.

"We gear everything we do to the tournament," Thompson said after the Georgia Tech game. "This is the Big Top, where the pressure is, where the excitement is."

There is more pressure and excitement for the Hoyas than any of the other teams that successfully defended the title. They will have to win six games to bring home the ring from the original field of 64 teams.

In 1972, UCLA had to win four games in the 25-team tournament. Now, the teams are seeded by the NCAA and sent any to of the four regionals as opposed to the days when a team stayed in its home region.

Winning it is definitely easier than defending it, as evidenced by the fact that 35 teams have failed to repeat as champions.

Will Georgetown become number 36 or will Thompson add his name to the list of Wooden, Henry Iba of Oklahoma State, Adolph Rupp of Kentucky, Phil Woolpert of San Francisco and Ed Jucker of Cincinnati — the repeaters?

Tigers think hot hand could decide tourney

Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Dana Kirk thinks that by the time teams reach the NCAA's Final Four, it's pretty much a matter of who has a good day that decides victory.

"I've always said that's what tournaments are all about. Whoever has hot hands can prevail," the Memphis State basketball coach said Monday.

Kirk's Tigers, ranked fifth during the regular season, face Villanova in the NCAA semifinals Saturday.

As his team began workouts to prepare for that contest, Kirk said the squad would work on basics for several days before he decides on a game plan for the Wildcats.

"We'll review and go with the things we've been doing to give us our 31 wins. We're not going to completely get away from anything," he said.

Keith Lee, the 6-foot-10 senior forward who holds Memphis State's all-time scoring and rebounding records, has gotten into foul trouble in the past four tournament games.

But Kirk said he's not worried about a repeat of that situation.

"I won't anticipate anybody getting into foul trouble. That's not something we look for."

Many NCAA observers say Georgetown will be the team to beat for the championship, but Kirk said he's not worried about Georgetown just yet.

"I want to play Villanova," he said.

Vincent Askew, a 6-5 freshman guard who has started for Memphis State this year, said he would like to face Georgetown, however, in the NCAA finals.

"That's the one I'm really looking forward to," Askew said. "You can't hold anything against Villanova because they're a good ball club. If they weren't, they wouldn't be in the Final Four."

"But everywhere I go, I hear Georgetown this and Georgetown that; they can't be beat and all that. They've lost two games. That proves they can be beat, and I believe we can beat them," he said.
