Prenatal care seen as less costly option

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Spokesmen for a coalition of health provider and community organizations said Monday it would be cheaper for Texas to provide prenatal care to 50,000 indigent women than to care for their children later.

"This is cheaper than not doing anything," said Ron Anderson, head of Parkland Hospital, Dallas, and chairman of the State Board of Health. "If we fail in this legislature we are just passing the debt on to another generation."

Pregnancies among unwed women is the most costly program in almost all hospitals in Texas, said Helen Farabee, chairman of the Task Force on Indigent Health Care.

The Texas Maternal and Child

Health Coalition announced its support of four bills recommended by the task force and a fifth one designed to help the hungry and undernourished in Texas.

Mike Hudson, co-chairman of the coalition of 12 organizations, estimated the entire package cost of the five bills would be $80 million to $100 million for the next two years.

"The coalition has no specific funding recommendations," Hudson said. "We will take the money from anywhere it comes."

The coalition said its immediate goal was passage of the maternal and child health recommendations. One measure would provide expanded prenatal, delivery and postnatal services to indigent pregnant women and children who are not insured.

Citizens form groups against toxic dumps

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Several citizen organizations announced Monday that they would take care of their neighbors as well as themselves by promoting stronger laws to protect the public's health and environment.

Helen Vickery, speaker for People Against a Contaminated Environment, said, "There's no excuse for putting chemicals that can cause cancer and birth defects into a convenient hole in the ground, where they can leak into streams and groundwater, when alternative technologies are available for treating toxic wastes."

Si Grider of Concerned Citizens Against Pollution issued a statement that said an application had been filed with the Texas Department of Water Resources to inject 110 million barrels of toxic wastes into the Wharton County salt dome at Boling.

Grider said the project would involve the construction of 44 caverns, each about the size of the Houston Astrodome.

Pamela Brodie of the Texas Center for Rural Studies said the groups would push for legislation that would promote:

- The cleaning up of dangerous leaking toxic waste dumps.
- Safe recycling or the destruction of toxic waste.
- Better monitoring of disposal facilities.
- The safe location of incinerators and other disposal facilities.
