Kirkpatrick changes political parties

Associated Press
 WASHINGTON — Former U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, saying she is "tired of swimming against the current of my own party," changed her voter registration Wednesday from Democrat to Republican.

Hours after her new voter registration card was delivered to election officials in suburban Montgomery County, Md., Kirkpatrick told a news conference that she still admires her Democratic heroes of the past.

"If Harry Truman were running for president today, I would vote for him," she said, adding that her first vote was cast for Truman in 1948. She said her next vote was for Adlai Stevenson, the Democratic presidential nominee who lost to Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1952.

Schroeder to leave hospital

Associated Press
 LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Artificial heart recipient William Schroeder will be released Saturday from the Louisville hospital where he has lived since his Nov. 25 implant. Humana Inc. spokesman said Wednesday.

The Jasper, Ind., man will ride in his customized van at 2 p.m. from Humana Hospital Audubon to a transitional apartment across the street, said Robert Irvine, Humana Inc. director of public relations.

The decision was made by implant surgeon William C. DeVries, Irvine said.

Schroeder, the second person ever to receive a permanent Jarvik heart, has lived longer than anyone with the plastic-and-metal device.

On March 16, he completed his 112th day on the heart, equaling the time of Barney Clark, the first implant recipient who died in 1983.

Originally, doctors had planned to release Schroeder on Feb. 14, his birthday, but scrapped that plan because of a persistent fever and flu-like symptoms.
