Leadership in question

Baptist dispute brewing

Associated Press

DALLAS — Two Baptist leaders say their churches and others may withhold funds to the denomination if its fundamentalist president is not re-elected during this summer's Southern Baptist Convention.

The Rev. James T. Draper Jr. and the Rev. Bailey Smith, both former presidents of the convention, said Tuesday that they would ask their churches to hold back financial support if the Rev. Charles Stanley is not re-elected president.

"We might escrow our funds in order to get people to sit down and talk about solutions" to the six-year battle between Baptist fundamentalists and moderates, Draper said.

Draper, pastor of First Baptist Church in Euless, Texas, was SBC president from 1982 to 1984.

Smith, SBC president from 1980 to 1982 and pastor of the First Southern Baptist Church in Del City, Okla., said he thought some churches would leave the denomination if Stanley loses his bid for a second term this summer in Dallas.

"I would say we would immediately lose 100 churches, and I think eventually it would number several hundred because I've had several ministers say to me I would not want to be part of a denomination that doesn't want Charles Stanley," Smith told the Dallas Times Herald.

Fundamentalists have elected the last four presidents of the denomination as part of an effort to fight what they call a liberal trend in Baptist institutions.

Moderates generally favor greater scope for Bible interpretation.

Draper said he hoped that by bringing up the subject of money he could show people a problem existed and perhaps motivate them to find a solution. But he said he was likely to be misinterpreted.

A moderate leader, the Rev. Carl Sherman, said Draper's remarks were divisive and a sign of disloyalty to the denomination.

"Our church didn't withhold our money when he won," said Sherman, pastor of Fort Worth's Broadway Baptist Church. "We are loyal to some ideas and we are staying hitched up. If he doesn't win, does he pick up his marbles and go home?"

State fees, tuition hike package falls short of balancing budget

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The House Appropriations Committee on Wednesday backed off its previous proposal to raise the annual motor vehicle inspection fee from $5.25 to $10.

Overall, the committee voted final approval to a fee-hike package of about $120 million, far short of what's needed for a balanced budget.

If the fee bill and a college tuition hike bill legislative approval, the appropriations bill as tentatively approved by the committee would leave the state about $72 million short, according to Ron Lindsey of the Legislative Budget Board.

"It's coming," committee member Tom Uher, D-Bay City, said of a tax bill. "It's just a matter of time."

The vote to keep the vehicle inspection fee at $5.25 a year came as Gov. Mark White let lawmakers know he opposes an increase. White mentioned his opposition during breakfast meetings with House members at the Governor's Mansion on Tuesday and Wednesday.

White said he felt last year's increase in vehicle registration fee and the gasoline tax left a heavy enough burden on motorists.

"I told them I was concerned about that and I've got some alternative proposals that will give us a better way to approach the problem of revenues," White said Wednesday.

He backs a court fee increase program that could raise $21 million a year.
