Mattox says Lucas' mass confessions doubtful

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox voiced doubts Monday that self-proclaimed serial murderer Henry Lee Lucas committed all the slayings to which he confessed.

Mattox also said his office refused to help prosecute some of the Lucas cases.

At various times, Lucas has confessed to slaying between 100 and 600 people. Nationwide, police have closed the books on 210 slayings based on those confessions.

Mattox said his office has looked at 13 Lucas cases so far, two of which were requests for help from local prosecutors.

"In the cases where we've been asked to assist, we will not be lending prosecution assistance ... except to further investigate to determine whether or not someone else possibly has committed the offense," Mattox said.

"That's not to say he (Lucas) did not commit the crimes. But certainly, there's no evidence there with the exception of his own confessions."

Mattox refused to specify which cases his office reviewed. When asked, the attorney general's office helps local prosecutors in capital murder cases. The office also reviews death penalty cases on behalf of the state.

Asked whether he believes Lucas is guilty of all the killings to which he has confessed, Mattox replied flatly: "No."

In an interview with the Dallas Times Herald, Lucas, 48, now claims that all but three of his confessions were bogus. Lucas says he staged the hoax "to show law enforcement doesn't do its job."

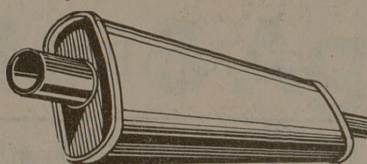

Mattox noted that news reports indicate that in some cases, the one-eyed drifter was thousands of miles from the scenes of crimes or would have had to travel constantly to commit all the killings.

While declining to criticize police handling of any case, Mattox said:

"I know that there is substantial desire among law enforcement people to clear cases. And sometimes, cases are cleared even when it's not justified ... We would hope it's happened to a minimum in these particular cases."

Mattox said his office is continuing to investigate Lucas cases and has "intensified our review of a few." The office has assigned a full-time investigator to the job, said spokeswoman Elna Christopher.
