Senate OKs presidential primary bill

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas senators passed to the House Tuesday the touchy political issue of an early March presidential primary that Democrats say would give the state more clout in presidential elections.

The bill, which sparked a six-hour filibuster by Senate Republicans Monday, was given final approval on voice vote without any additional discussion.

The measure goes to the House where a similar bill has been held in a subcommittee for several weeks.

Republicans objected to the estimated $10 million cost for the primary, and Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, responded that amount represented "one-ten thousandth of the state budget but would give us an opportunity to cast a vote and a vote that will count in the single most important election in the nation."

The presidential primary measure, which originated from a move by the State Democratic Executive Committee, would allow Texans to vote in a "Super Tuesday" presidential primary in March 1988.

Edwards' bill would set up a presidential primary for Democrats and Republicans on the second Tuesday of March in presidential election years.

The May primary date for state and local candidates would remain the same, but a person voting in the presidential primary would have to vote in the same party's primary in May.

For several years, Texas Republicans have been holding presidential primaries at the same time they vote in the May primary.

Texas Democrats in the past have chosen their delegates for national conventions, where the presidential nominee is selected, through a complex caucus system.

Under Edwards' bill, at least 75 percent of the delegates, excluding elected and party officials, would be named according to the popular vote in the presidential primary. Party conventions would choose the remaining 25 percent.
