

Survey says workers want dress codes

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. — Despite the restrictions involved, most workers whose companies have dress codes are solidly behind the policy, a recent survey shows.

Only 7 percent of those surveyed said dress codes should be less restrictive, while 1 percent said the dress code should be abolished at their company.

many students are interested only in their clubs or just have time for interests and getting their grades and their degrees and getting the heck out of here."

Student Government also has a problem with some people trying to do other's jobs, Royall says.

"We have a very decentralized organization and we need to pull everything together," he says. "Some of the legislative vice presidents were acting independently of other sources in Student Government. We need to make sure we're acting as one organization and not as individuals. Hopefully that will solve a lot of problems we have had this year."

Student Government also has a problem dealing with the University's administration, Thode says.

"In the past we started negotiating from a position of compromise," he says. "Instead of working toward a compromise, we started from a position of compromise and worked toward the administration's position. We left the students a long time ago and that was foolish."

Roberts says he agrees with Thode. "I don't think you should walk in there ready to compromise," Roberts says. "You should be professional, aggressive, pursue it as far as you can with good taste and then compromise if you have to."

But Royall says Student Government needs the support of the student body if it is going to have an assertive approach.

"If we can convince them (the administration) that we have the authority to speak for 36,000 students, then hopefully we can put them in a position to where they have to listen to us," Royall says. "But that doesn't mean they have to do what we want them to do."

Royall says Student Government needs to communicate with students to get their support.

"This year, communication is going to be a real challenge," he says. "We need to overcome the stereotypes that people have of Student Government."

These three squirrels attracted more attention than they realized. Besides the photographer, at least five other people watched the exploits of the furry creatures on a tree outside of Bolton Hall.

a.m. in the Memorial Student Center and Rudder Tower, Carmichael said. The Drifters, a contemporary band and The Ed Gerlach Orchestra will provide the music in the two ballrooms.

Gansky said that valet parking will be provided in Rudder parking lot, on a first-come-first-serve basis. Members of MSC Hospitality will be parking the cars, Gansky said. People can pick up their keys at Rudder Box Office when they want to leave the dance.

A photographer will be set up in Rudder Auditorium by 3 p.m. that afternoon, so students can avoid the long lines to get pictures taken that night, Gansky said. Also, party pictures will be available on a pre-paid basis: four pictures for $10 or $2.50 per picture.

Patterson said the price for the weekend package, including all three events, is $60 per couple. Tickets for each event may be purchased at the Rudder Box Office until April 26. Prices are $35 for Ring Dance, $25 for the banquet and $5 for the bash. All tickets are for couples.

"All profit from Senior Weekend goes to the Class of '85 gift," Patterson said. "We need to support the gift a whole lot."

Muster Chairman Leannah Reed read the poem "The Muster Tradition" at the symposium. Muster will be Sunday at 3 p.m., in G. Rollie White Coliseum.

Reed, and Muster subchairmen Susan Aycock, Laura Lister, Matt Holley and Bill Hayes, explained each committee's input to the event.

Lister said the Muster Awareness Committee invites families of the Aggies honored to Muster, Lister said. The families also are honored at a reception sponsored by the committee.

Gen. Ormond Simpson, Class of '36, will be the speaker at Muster. The Muster selection committee began with a list of 40 possible speaker candidates before the decision was narrowed to Simpson.

Aycock said the public relations committee worked closely with the Association of Former Students on the publicity posters. Most of the posters have been distributed around campus, but some have been sent to organizations affiliated with Texas A&M throughout the United States.

"Muster buttons are now on sale in the MSC for 75¢ each," Aycock said. At the Muster ceremony, the wife of Col. McDavitt, one of the men present at the first Muster on Corregidor Island, will present to A&M a flag made by those men from parachutes.

Also at the symposium Wednesday, Graduate Student Council members Ronda Duckers, vice president for external affairs, and Jayanthi Kasiraj, treasurer, discussed the council.

"A lot of students are unaware of the fact that there is representation for graduate students," Duckers said.

A few of the issues concerning graduate students include on-campus housing and a possible graduate student lounge, she said.

Kasiraj said, "The tuition increase is affecting graduate students much more, because most graduate students are non-residents."

Softly call the muster

Let comrade answer, "Here!"

Their spirits hover round us

As if to bring us cheer!

Mark them "Present" in our hearts;

We'll meet some other day.

There is no death, but life eterne

For comrades such as they!
