Oilers hire lawyers in effort to insure Browns get Kosar

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Houston Oilers have retained a law firm to join Howard Slusher in studying the team's options in the wake of Tuesday's ruling by National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle that Miami (Fla.) quarterback Bernie Kosar is eligible for the NFL's supplemental draft.

The ruling, in effect, gives Kosar the right to decide if he wants to play for the Minnesota Vikings or Cleveland Browns next season.

Kosar, who has shown a preference to play for the Browns, has until midnight Thursday to declare himself eligible for the regular NFL draft April 30.

If Kosar decides to participate in the regular draft, he would be picked by the Vikings, who traded with Houston for the Oilers' No. 2 overall pick in exchange for Minnesota's No. 3 pick in the first round and its second-round selection.

If Kosar fails to participate in the regular draft, he can petition the league to be included in the supplemental draft, where the Browns have the first pick.

Shortly after receiving word of Rozelle's decision, the Oilers announced in a statement that they

*"We've felt throughout that we've done the things we need to do (to attain quarterback Bernie Kosar), but this is not a time for celebration."
— Browns' Head Coach Marty Scottenheimer*

had retained Houston attorney Richard Caldwell of the Houston firm of Mayer-Gay-Caldwell to work with Slusher on the case.

Slusher represented the Oilers last week in a meeting with Rozelle to plead the Oilers' case.

The Oiler statement said that Rozelle had validated the Houston-Minnesota and Buffalo-Cleveland trades but unless written notice by Kosar, postmarked no later than midnight Thursday, is received in the commissioner's office advising of Kosar's intent to graduate from the University of Miami prior to the 1985 fall semester, Kosar will not be eligible for the NFL draft on April 30.

"The Oilers and counsel are reviewing the opinion of the commissioner and evaluating all options," the Oiler statement said.

"It is unlikely that any action will be taken until Minnesota has exhausted all efforts to convince Kosar to notify the league, formally, in accordance with the commissioner's ruling. The Oilers have been requested by counsel to make no further statement to the media at this time."

Under its trade agreement with the Oilers, Minnesota still has the No. 2 selection in the regular draft, but if Kosar is unavailable, the Oilers will not receive Minnesota's second-round pick that was a part of the original deal.

Cleveland coach Marty Schottenheimer, in Houston on a scouting mission, told KICK Radio the Browns weren't ready to start celebrating.

"We're pleased that our position has been upheld by the league," Schottenheimer said. "We've felt throughout that we've done the things we need to do but this is not a time for celebration. There are still things that need to be resolved and I frankly don't know at this point what's going to happen."
