5 Aggies chosen to be on 1985-86 advisory board

By KAREN HELLER
Reporter

Five Texas A&M students have been selected to serve on the Chancellor's Student Advisory Board for 1985-86.

The members are Bonnelyn Krumpotic, Madelon Yanta, Michael O'Quinn, and Doug Robinette. Sean Royall, as student body president, is automatically on the board and Mark Self has been chosen as an alternate.

Yanta and O'Quinn also served on the board during 1984-85.

The committee members make recommendations to Chancellor Arthur G. Hansen to give to the Texas A&M Board of Regents. Representatives from the other Texas A&M University System schools also serve on the board.

Yanta will be chairman of the CSAB. Last year, the chairman of the CSAB was a student at Tarleton State University.

Dr. John Koldus, vice president for student services, says the idea for the board was generated three years ago by students in the Legislative Study Group. The students talked to Hansen, Koldus says, and the chancellor agreed to give the board a try.

The CSAB is made up of five students from A&M-Galveston, and three students each from Tarleton State and Prairie View. Each school also has one alternate on the board.

The committee members meet on the campus where the Texas A&M Board of Regents is meeting and discusses issues and problems concerning the TAMUS. The council meets on the A&M campus every other month.

The agenda for the advisory council is based on issues the students want to discuss, because "you never want to have something artificial in terms of an agenda," Koldus says.

Michael O'Quinn, who served on the CSAB last year, thinks that this could be the best year yet for the board.

Although last year was only the second year for the board, O'Quinn says the board worked on some projects that affected the University system as a whole.

For example, the CSAB discussed the concerns and needs of non-traditional students — older students who have come back to school — O'Quinn says.

The board also discussed the "Texas Plan," a desegregation plan which may be implemented at Prairie View. The plan suggests that scholarships be offered to white students living near Prairie View to desegregate the school.

The CSAB charter requires that goals be set for every year, O'Quinn says. But, he says specific goals for the upcoming year haven't been established yet.

With Yanta as chairman, O'Quinn says it looks like it will be a good year for student input.

The CSAB has to be perceived as a cross-section of the campus, O'Quinn says, not as a part of Student Government or an MSC group. This year, the CSAB will focus on better communication between the students, the faculty and the researchers on campus, he says.

"We believe students should be in a position to have a significant say-so in student life," O'Quinn says.

Council members are chosen by a selection committee appointed by Texas A&M President Frank Vandiver. The selection committee is made up of two students and two faculty members. Applications are taken in April and interviews are conducted later.

To apply for a council position, Texas A&M students must have 27 credit hours at a college or university, have attended A&M at least one semester and have a 2.25 overall grade-point ratio.
