'Bruised' Astro coach bitter about his firing

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Former Houston Astros assistant coach Don Leppert contended last week that he had been fired in a shakeup of the Astros' coaching staff while General Manager Al Rosen said Leppert was only being reassigned.

Leppert repeated his dissatisfaction with the move Monday and said that perhaps he didn't fit in with an organization that seemed more interested in looking "clean-shaven" than winning baseball games.

Now Leppert is officially out of a job.

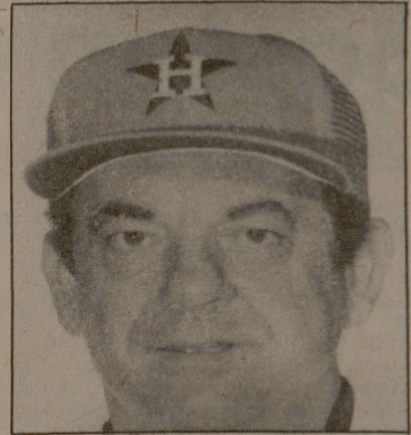

"I talked to Don this morning and told him I don't think we can use him anymore if he can't go along with what we feel are the best interests of this ball club," Rosen said after reading Leppert's comments in The Houston Post.

Leppert, 52, an Astros coach for the past six years, became the odd man out last week when Rosen decided to bring Les Moss back from a minor league assignment to work with pitching coach Jerry Walker.

Rosen said he created a position for Leppert evaluating minor league players, managers and coaches and reporting back to Rosen.

"I thought I was being very creative with Don and it would have been something that really would have helped me to have someone of Don's ability telling me what's going on in the minor leagues," Rosen said.

Leppert, who had nothing to do with pitching instruction, told The Post "Two other guys (coaches) didn't do their jobs last week in Chicago and I get fired. It's not right and I'm a little bruised over that."

Rosen denied last week's performances in Chicago had anything to do with his decision.

"It had nothing to do with what happened in Chicago last week," Rosen said. "It was just in evaluating the coaching staff we had and the roles they played, that this was best for the organization."

Moss and Walker worked together with Astros pitchers last season but Moss started this season working with minor league pitchers.

"This move was like going back to the drawing board," Rosen said. "Last season it worked better. I was not satisfied with the way our bullpen was working when you have something like 11 losses attributed to the bullpen."

The Astros lost two games to the Cubs last week in Chicago and rookie Mark Ross in the game. Ace reliever Dave Smith warmed up in the bullpen.

"We lost two games in a row because we left a rookie in there, Mark Ross, with one of the best right-handed relief pitchers this year, Dave Smith, standing there warming up," Leppert said.

"I still don't know what happened, whether it was a miscommunication or what," Leppert said. "But it was my fault. I had nothing to do with it."

Leppert, whose contract runs through the end of this season, said he apparently didn't fit in with the image the Astros management tries to enforce.

"The Astros want everyone to be a gentleman, to look nice on the field, to have no beer on the field," Leppert said. "Sometimes I think they believe that's more important than winning games."

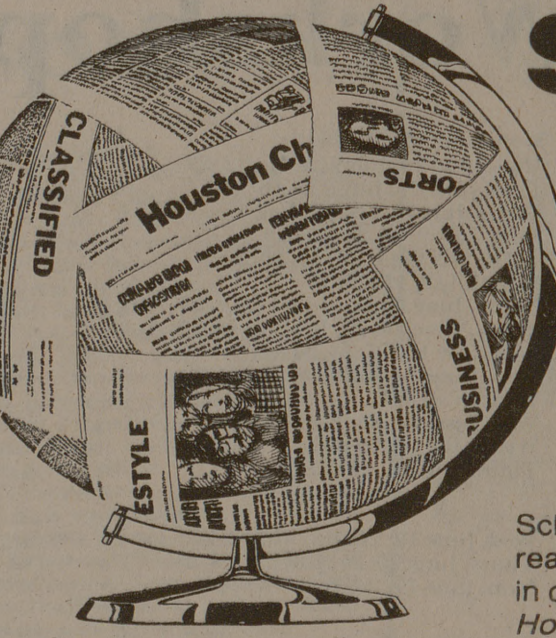

"All that Mickey Mouse stuff is fine if you're in a prep school, but the important thing on this level is winning games. They think being clean-shaven is more important than win."

"I think that attitude is sadly lacking through the whole organization. They want to make it like a Sunday school church game."
