AIDS

Houston area blood banks begin screening donations

Associated Press
 HOUSTON — In an effort to prevent the spread of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, area blood banks are screening all donated blood for the presence of an AIDS virus antibody, a blood center official said.

Bill Teague, president of the Gulf Coast Regional Blood Center, said the screening tests provide an extra safety check to prevent the spreading of AIDS through blood transfusions. The blood center handles 170,000 units of blood a year.

The screening test, manufactured by Liton, does not determine if a person actually has AIDS. Instead, it tests for the presence of the antibody to the HTLV-III virus, which is believed to cause the disease.

A positive test result does not mean a person definitely will develop AIDS, researchers said.

Teague said all members of high-risk groups — including gay males who have had more than one sexual partner in the last five years, intravenous drug abusers and hemophiliacs — are asked not to donate blood.

Richard Adams, chairman of the Mayor's Task Force on AIDS, said gay leaders stand behind the blood center's call for sexually active gay men to refrain from donating blood.

"However, we do not recommend they take the antibody test for HTLV-III, since it has no diagnostic value and it is not an indicator of current or future health status," Adams said. "Studies in New York and San Francisco show that only 10 percent of those exposed to the virus come down with AIDS."

As of March, 216 cases of AIDS have been recorded in Houston and 108 have died. Four cases were attributed to blood transfusions performed by the city, Teague said.

Kitten killing prompts woman to sue shelter

Associated Press
 NEW BRAUNFELS, — A woman is suing The New Braunfels Humane Society for $10,000 in damages under the Deceptive Trade Practices Act, and for $5,000 in lawyer's fees.

Hope Dean said she and her 2-year-old son took six kittens to the animal shelter on May 23, were promised that good homes would be found for them and left after paying the required $15 shelter fee.

A few minutes later, Dean changed her mind and returned to the shelter, planning to keep one kitten.

But the animals were dead. "Those were six healthy kittens assassinated by those people," said lawyer Norman Dean, who with his wife, is suing the humane society.

Cheryl Pillar, manager of the shelter, said the kittens were killed because they were younger than eight weeks old and, therefore, more likely to get sick. She also said the shelter was crowded at the time.

According to the suit, when the kittens were dropped off at the shelter, an attendant assured Dean the kittens would get shots and that "all attempts would be made to find them homes."

When Dean learned that the animals were dead, she asked for and received a refund of her $15 shelter fee.

"We're not out to make money," Dean said. "The organization is worthwhile and necessary. We just want them to clean up their act."

If the Deans win, they said they will give the money to the national Humane Society.

Pillar said that national officials of the Humane Society have recommended that shelters kill kittens younger than eight weeks because they are more susceptible to disease.

"There's no demand for adoption, and we can't take chances with sick animals," Pillar said. "There's a sign here that says we can't guarantee a pet will be adopted."
