New University Plus program starts

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Classes are expected to quickly fill as registration begins Monday at noon for a new Memorial Student Center program, University Plus. The program offers a range of extracurricular summer courses, including tae kwon do and basket weaving.

The non-credit classes will be taught by certified instructors, said Wayne Helton, the program's supervisor.

Some of the more popular courses, Helton said, are country and western dance, bartending, wine appreciation, and arts and crafts.

The MSC University Plus program is the result of combining the After Hours Committee, a community education program offering classes such as aerobics and cooking, and the MSC Crafts Center, which offered arts and crafts, Helton said.

"It was decided this past spring to combine the old After Hours Committee and the MSC Crafts Center into one program since they offered the same source of programming opportunities," he said.

The Crafts Center, Helton said, had been run by a full-time staff while the After Hours Committee had been run by a volunteer student committee. He said the involvement in the After Hours Committee changed each semester.

"The reason why they decided to combine the two programs was to allow for more professional management so the program would be more consistent from year to year and not suffer slumps and cyclic things like some student organizations do," he said.

Helton said both programs were very successful.

Classes are open to anyone over

18. Helton said an age limit was placed because some classes will be held in clubs that serve alcohol. Also, some classes will use heavy machinery, and the A&M insurance policy does not include minors.

though some exceptions will be made, he said.

Non-students must buy a $1 card.

Registration will continue until the classes are filled, or until meetings begin. For more information call 845-1631 or stop by the University Plus Crafts Center in the basement of the MSC.

Faculty Senate to meet Monday

By KAREN BLOCH
Staff Writer

A recommendation that the final oral examination be optional for non-thesis master's degree candidates will be considered by the Faculty Senate Monday.

Dr. Jaan Laane, senate speaker, said Thursday that the Graduate Council's proposal should draw debate among senators because the graduate dean is opposed to it, but a majority of the other council members support it.

Laane also said that the new policy on sick leave for state employees may be discussed in an emergency session.

A rider to the 1986-87 state appropriations bill forbids state employees to accrue sick leave if they work less than 12 months of the year. Prior to the passage of this bill, all employees earned one day of sick leave per month.

Laane said he believes that Texas universities will be the only ones in the country with this policy.

"The policy's ridiculous," Laane said. "You can't expect all the people to be well all the time."

Other items the senate will discuss include the procedure used in designating professor emeritus status, new courses and course withdrawals.

Col. Donald L. Burton will give an update of the August hazing incident in which sophomore cadet Bruce Goodrich died after "motivational exercises." The effects of this incident on the Corps of Cadets will be discussed.
