Reagan lobbying House for support of chemical arms

Associated Press
 WASHINGTON — President Reagan, hoping to finally win support for renewed U.S. production of chemical weapons, is lobbying the House of Representatives to approve the only weapon denied him as part of his defense buildup.

Reagan met at the White House with 40 legislators Monday, a day before the House starts debating the bill authorizing Pentagon spending for fiscal 1986.

At the meeting Reagan received the report of a chemical warfare review commission he appointed earlier. The panel is composed of pro-nerve gas members who support an end to the U.S. nerve gas production moratorium.

Zbigniew Brzezinski, national security adviser to former President Carter, was part of Monday's White House meeting and told reporters later he supports new chemical weapons.

For three years, the Democratic-controlled House has refused Reagan's request for nerve gas.

The defense spending bill that passes the House will have to be reconciled with the Senate version, which passed two weeks ago. That bill includes $163 million for the Army to prepare to build a new generation of nerve gases, a proposal approved 50-46.

Reagan and other proponents say the weapons are needed to offset the Soviet arsenal and win reductions in arms control talks, while opponents say the current U.S. stockpile is enough and a new program would be too expensive.

The current proposal calls for building binary weapons, so named because they would be composed of two non-lethal chemicals kept apart until a shell is fired or bomb dropped, when they would then mix to form a deadly gas.

The Senate approved a defense package of $302 billion, which would permit spending to rise at the expected inflation rate next year.

The House bill would essentially freeze Pentagon spending at current levels of about $292 billion, some $10 billion less than the Senate version.

Police find sixth body at survivalist retreat

Associated Press
 WEST POINT, Calif. — Investigators unearthed a sixth body Tuesday at a survivalist's mountain compound where they already had found 45 pounds of charred human bones and clues to the fate of 22 people.

Calaveras County Sheriff's Deputy Steve Mathews said the bones of the latest unidentified victim were discovered buried in two feet of dirt.

The sex, age and approximate date of death of the body were not immediately determined, Mathews said.

Investigators also picked through rubbish at a nearby dump site and found more bones, stained clothes, and other evidence they believe may be linked to Leonard Lake, who died June 6 after swallowing a poison pill while in police custody.

Mark Olenlager, investigator for the state Department of Justice, said authorities were uncertain whether the bones at the dump site were human.

Sheriff's spokesman Jim Stenquist said Lake sold items belonging to some of the missing people at yard sales.

Authorities plan to demolish an alleged sexual torture cell to look for more bones in a cavity underneath, but an architect will make drawings of the concrete cell to build a scale model for court evidence.

More than 700 pieces of evidence, not including bones, have been removed from the property where sheriff's deputies believe Lake, 39, and his companion, ex-convict and ex-Marine Charles C. Ng, 24, took some of the missing people.

Landlord sentenced to serve time in slum

Associated Press
 LOS ANGELES — A neurosurgeon has been ordered to move from Beverly Hills for 30 days to an apartment resembling a rat-infested flat he rents to a family of seven.

The judge ordered Dr. Milton Avol to spend equal time in a clean jail cell and one of the garbage-strewn apartments he owns after he failed to significantly improve the buildings during 36 months' probation.

For three years, Ramona Mota, her husband and five children have squeezed into a four-room, fourth-floor apartment in a building owned by Avol on South Main Street near the downtown garment district.

Rats, cockroaches, mosquitoes and flies have become almost like part of the furnishings, according to court testimony.

On Monday, Municipal Court Judge Veronica Simmons McBeth ordered Avol to report for a 30-day jail term beginning Thursday. The day he is released, he will be escorted to an apartment about two miles away from Mota's, McBeth said.

In 1983, Avol was convicted of violating health, fire and building and safety codes at four of his apartment complexes, but was given 36 months to bring the buildings into compliance with regulations.
