Science students must take exam

Any junior or senior in the College of Science who has not previously taken the English Proficiency Examination should plan to take the test June 27 unless they have completed English 301 with a minimum grade of C. Students in the College of Science must pass the proficiency exam or satisfactorily complete English 301 by the spring semester of their junior year in order to qualify as a degree candidate.

The English Proficiency Exam will be administered by the English department. Students in the biology, chemistry, mathematics and physics departments should register for the exam in the Blocker before June 27.

Texas high court hearing pros, cons of disputed ruling

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court took under consideration Wednesday arguments for and against a controversial rule that bars public school students with failing grades from participating in extra-curricular activities.

The nine justices, who interrupted attorneys frequently with questions, are expected to make a decision before schools start this fall.

"The simple issue here is whether the Legislature can say that public schools are for the purpose of educating students, and really mean it," said Dave Richards, first assistant attorney general. Richards spoke for the state and the Texas Education Agency in favor of the rule.

Two Houston attorneys, representing 45 students who have been caught by the rule, claimed the rule was unconstitutional.

The rule was passed by the Board of Education in carrying out policy directives of the major reform bill passed by a special legislative session in 1984.

A student failing to make a 70 in any course during a semester period can be banned from extra-curricular activities the next weeks.

"This rule resulted from the Legislature attempting to put the emphasis on the curriculum in schools, not the frills," said Richards. "This rule says the business of schools is education. If a student passes his work he can enjoy frills. If he does not pass, he cannot."

Houston attorney Anthony Shepard, who was representing a group of Harris County students, said "This rule (infringes) on the fundamental rights of students. It is more than sports."

Mystery cache sparks U.S. Army investigation

Associated Press

DALLAS — The U.S. Army inspector general has been asked to investigate the source of a weapons cache, valued at more than $1 million, found a year ago, police said.

At the time of the seizure, authorities called the cache the largest illegal stockpile of weapons recovered in U.S. history. So far, police, the Army, the FBI and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms have been unable to determine where the weapons came from.

"Here's a million dollars worth of stuff — rockets marked 'U.S. Army,' — and we don't know where it came from," said police intelligence Capt. Greg Holliday.

Police confiscated weapons ranging from gun ammunition to rockets, as well as military uniforms from an East Dallas home and other residence in nearby Rockwood.

"And until we know the source of the munitions, we don't know we can do anything to prevent another arms distribution to cities as Dallas," Holliday said.

The munitions recovered last fall are classified, 16-page list, Holliday said. Many of the weapons are green and marked "U.S. Army."

"It's time that the Army answer some questions," Holliday said.

Col. Paul Lovgren of the inspector general's office said he could comment on whether his office would investigate the source of the weapons.
