Astronomers disturbed over comet's exploitation

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Astronomers are not the only ones readying for the return of Halley's comet.

A Brazilian movie company began preparations four years ago and is now filming the first episode of "The Halley's," a proposed television series about super-heroes cast adrift when a nuclear holocaust destroys their planet, except for a remnant who travel to Earth on Halley's comet.

Tri-Star Pictures last week released "Lifeforce," a movie about a group of blood-sucking aliens who travel to Earth on Halley's comet.

Burt Rubin, an entrepreneur whose chief claim to fame is the invention of E-Z Wider cigarette papers in 1971, checked into the telescope market in 1980 and has since sold thousands of "Halley scopes." He predicts he will sell thousands more, even with such competitors as Comet Seeker, Comet Catcher and Cometron.

The list goes on, with a Halley's Comet Fan Club, T-shirts, pins, caps, key chains, sports bags, jackets, a book of comet poetry, newsletters, comet pills, comet cruises to the South Pacific, comet maps, stickers and books — at last count, 35 had been published or were scheduled to be published by year's end.

"It's probably going to hit at least 40, to the best of my knowledge, and heaven only knows how many others are being prepared by people who don't go through commercial trade channels," said Ruth Freitag, a senior science specialist with the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C.

She is a little disturbed by what some of the comet entrepreneurs are saying. "There's so much erroneous information being circulated by people who have the best intentions but just didn't do their homework as well as they might have done," she said.

Many astronomers would agree with her.

"I don't want astronomers to come across as curmudgeons," said Andrew Fraknoi, executive officer of the Astronomical Society of the Pacific. "It's a free country, and anyone is free to make money from comets — there are certainly enough astronomers writing books about the comet, and they're not the ones to throw stones."

Alan MacRobert, an editor at Sky & Telescope magazine in Cambridge, Mass., said, "The worst problem in this regard is advertisements for small telescopes with high power advertised as your gateway to the universe. You're going to see people very disappointed." Many astronomers say that a pair of binoculars is better than a telescope for comet watching.
