Concert tickets given away

KKYS aids three lucky listeners

By CINDY IRVING
Reporter

Three KKYS-105 listeners have won tickets to the "Live Aid" concert July 13.

Bill Todd, Greg Bailey, and Alma Ocana of College Station each won a pair of tickets in the "Live-Aid" contest KKYS sponsored last week.

Todd won two tickets to the London performance. Bailey and Ocana each won a pair of tickets to the Philadelphia performance.

Todd and a friend will be attending the London performance. However, Bailey and Ocana haven't deecided whether or not they will attend the Philadelphia show.

Skip Bishop, KKYS program director and disc jockey, says the contest began June 21 when KKYS staff members put registration boxes at many local businesses in Bryan and College Station.

Bishop says the deadline to enter names for the contest was July 5 at noon.

Bishop announced Todd's name shortly after 5 p.m. that day, giving her 10 minutes and five seconds to call the station and claim the tickets.

If she had failed to call in time, another name would have been drawn, Bishop says.

Todd and a friend will leave from Houston Intercontinental Airport Thursday for four days and three nights in London. Their airfare, hotel and expenses will be paid by KKYS.

Shortly after Todd claimed her tickets to the London show, Bishop announced Bailey's name as a winner of the Philadelphia tickets.

Neil Harrison, another KKYS disc jockey, announced Ocana's name after 5 p.m. Monday as the winner of a second set of Philadelphia tickets, the last ones KKYS will award.

The concert is being produced to raise money for famine victims in Ethiopia, Bishop says.

"More than 50 performers are scheduled to perform at the concerts in London and Philadelphia," he added. "The concert is a volunteer effort, none of the performers are being paid."

He says some of the performers include:

Phil Collins, Bruce Springsteen, Wham!, Madonna, Paul McCartney, Tina Turner, Hall & Oates and Billy Ocean.

Bishop says the London and Philadelphia concerts will be televised to 100 countries Saturday on ABC-TV from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. Music Television (MTV) will televise the concerts from 6 a.m. to 11 p.m. Saturday.

Vet students practice using CAT-scan

By BRETT MCGLAUN
Reporter

To help our animal friends, Texas A&M veterinary medicine students are using something usually thought of as being used only for humans.

Dr. Charles Hall, an associate professor for clinical studies at the Small Animal Clinic, says students have been using a CAT-scan to detect anything occupying space in the skull of small animals that could be harmful to them. This includes tumors, bleeding, and any other foreign bacteria in the head or nasal passages, Hall says.

"It's just another mode of X-ray that we use to take a cross-section of organs — mainly the head — looking for lesions in the brain," he says.

"We've been using the scanner for about two years," Hall says. "It's only one of the diagnostic tools we use."

CAT stands for computerized axial tomography. In plain English, that means the computer divides the skull into layers and looks in detail at each layer for harmful material.

Hall says the students who use the computer are usually fourth-year students or seniors taking the classes and using the information from the scanner to help them in their studies.

"The students use it, but it's operated by a technician," he says.

Hall says the scanner is mainly limited to small animals or parts of larger animals because of the size of its viewing field.

"The scanner is 13 inches in diameter or about the size of a human head," Hall says.

Group to discuss proposed cable service changes

The College Station City Affairs Council Committee will meet at 5 p.m. to discuss McCaw Cablevision's proposed changes in accordance with the city's current franchise ordinance.

The meeting will be in Conference Room A at City Hall, 1101 Texas Ave.

The public is invited to attend.

Scuffle occurs over display space between Pepsi, Coke employees

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The Cola War between Pepsi and Coke has resulted in some hand-to-hand combat in Austin, according to a Pepsi official.

A district manager for Pepsi-Cola has signed a misdemeanor assault complaint against a Coca-Cola salesman over a skirmish that broke out concerning prime display space in a supermarket.

Steve Choate, the Pepsi-Cola official, alleges that Skip Morgan, the Coca-Cola salesman, yelled obscenities at him and shoved him after he found Choate and another Pepsi employee dismantling a Coke display.

"It was just a real bad scene, and it was in one of the biggest stores in Austin," Choate said. "There were ladies there buying chips and soda and charcoal, and people were lining up to take sides. I think he was mad because he was going to lose the space."

Choate filed the complaint Monday in connection with the incident, which he said occurred last Thursday.

The two bottlers rotate use of a front area in the store. The Coke display was supposed to be down Thursday morning so Pepsi could set up there, Choate said.

"The store manager directed me to move the Coke display, so I did," Choate said. "Then he (Morgan) came in and started shoving me and yelling. I just went to the store manager, and he made him leave."
