Dr. Don Hellriegel, professor of management at Texas A&M, has been named the first recipient of the Jenna and Calvin R. Guest Professorship in Business Administration.

Hellriegel joined the A&M faculty in 1975, following six years on the faculties of Pennsylvania State University and the University of Colorado. At A&M, he has served as management department head and interim Systems Executive Vice Chancellor for Programs. He currently serves as a faculty appointee on the A&M Long Range Planning Committee.

The Abell-Hanger Foundation of Midland has awarded a grant to a new A&M center dedicated to the support and professional renewal of elementary and high school principals.

A&M's Principal's Center was established this year by the Texas A&M Board of Regents. Its goal is to provide training and professional enrichment for principals, the person who is the pivotal point for educational reform in our schools, says Dr. Dave Erlanson, head of educational administration.

The Abell-Hanger grant will be used to maintain the services provided by the center, including visits by staff to principals in the state and an 800 number advice hotline, he says.

Taped testimony law supported by Mattox

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Children who are victims of sexual abuse should be allowed to testify on videotape because they need protection from the traumas of a courtroom appearance, the attorney general argued Wednesday.

In a friend of the court brief, Attorney General Jim Mattox urged the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals to uphold the state law permitting videotaped testimony in such cases.

The 1983 law was declared unconstitutional by a state court of appeals in Dallas, which said the law violates a defendant's right to confront a witness against him.

But Mattox contends the Dallas court went too far. He said the law seeks to protect young children from psychological damage that might result from testifying in a courtroom in front of the assailant.

The brief says that in Texas, the number of confirmed victims of sexual abuse more than doubled between 1981 and 1984. More than 10,000 Texas children will be victims in 1985 if the trend continues, it says.

The Texas videotaping law is among several passed nationwide in recent years.

Mattox said the law "eases the child's embarrassment (and) spares the child witness the frightening experience of testifying before the alleged assailant."

The brief argues that a defendant's constitutional right to confront an accuser isn't violated because the statute requires that each side have a chance to preview the tape recording, so errors or inadequacies can be brought to the judge's attention before the jury sees the tape.

Under the law, a defendant's lawyer is present during videotaping, along with a prosecutor and the person representing the child's interests.

Mattox's brief suggests that any confidential communications needed between a defense lawyer and a defendant during cross-examination of a child could be done by two-way microphone or a telephone hookup.

Legislator says grants fund porn

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Rep. Tom DeLay, R-Texas, said Wednesday he is seeking a 10 percent cut in the budget of the National Endowment for the Arts because "taxpayers are being forced to subsidize pornographic poems" through federally financed endowment grants.

DeLay, a conservative freshman congressman from Houston, summoned reporters to his office and distributed samples of the writings of what he called "obscene poets" who had received endowment grants.

Among the samples were excerpts from seven poems containing four-letter words and graphic descriptions of sexual acts.

"Vowels have been omitted from four-letter words so as not to offend the reader," DeLay said.

He said the poems were written by endowment grant winners dating back to 1974, and were first disclosed three years ago in a survey published by Policy Review, a publication of the conservative Heritage Foundation.

DeLay also distributed copies of three lengthy, sexually explicit

Employees sue TDC for overtime pay

Associated Press

AUSTIN — In filing a lawsuit Wednesday seeking back overtime pay for Texas prison employees, a union official said other state agencies may face similar legal action.

The Texas State Employees Union is bringing the suit on behalf of some 300 prison guards and other Texas Department of Corrections employees who it alleges haven't been paid time-and-a-half for all overtime hours worked.

The suit follows a U.S. Supreme Court decision requiring state governments to pay overtime to public employees.

"There is a good possibility that other suits might follow," said B. Craig Deats, lawyer for the union. He said the Human Resources and the Mental Health and Mental Retardation departments are among those which may face action.

Eliseo Medina, the union's organizing coordinator, said the suit was filed on behalf of 300 prison employees who have signed consent letters. But he said thousands of TDC workers are due overtime pay, and more may join the legal action.

"Employees have not been credited for all overtime worked, have been forced to take overtime on an hour-per-hour basis rather than at the rate of time-and-a-half, and large numbers of workers — such as truck drivers, food service workers and maintenance workers — have been exempted from overtime," Medina told a news conference.

The lawsuit, mailed to the U.S. District Court in Houston, asks for overtime pay dating to Feb. 19, 1985, the date of the Supreme Court's overtime ruling, Deats said.

Phil Guthrie, a spokesman for the TDC administration in Huntsville, said the TDC is working with the U.S. Department of Labor to determine which employees are affected by the Supreme Court ruling.
