Judge imposes injunction against Texas nursing home

Associated Press
 AUSTIN — Attorney General Jim Mattox said Monday he obtained a temporary injunction against an Arlington nursing home following a state health department survey that turned up what Mattox called "serious deficiencies."
 Mattox said State District Judge Albert White Jr., Tarrant County, signed the order Monday against Christian Nursing Centers, Inc., which operates Christian Nursing Center on West Randol Mill Road. Also named as defendants in the state's case were Charles Groschup, president of the company; Irless Jordan, vice president; and Jerry Jordan, secretary-treasurer, Mattox said.

 Altus Hayes, a licensed nursing home administrator, was appointed temporary trustee of the nursing home and will make sure that residents are properly cared for, Mattox said in a statement.
 Mattox said the defendants had agreed to the injunction and trustee. The attorney general's lawsuit said the health department inspected the home last week and found a number of violations, including advanced bed sores; adverse skin conditions on 21 patients; and improperly positioned catheters.

 The suit alleged that the inspection had found "poor patient care" threatened the health and safety of residents and prescribed medication and treatment was not being followed.
 Mattox said the home would accommodate 120 residents, and currently has 90 residents.

Tuition will be $35 plus the cost of the textbook. Anyone 18 or older can contact the development council at 822-7421.

Jackson says minorities need equity

Associated Press
 DALLAS — On the 20th anniversary of the signing of the 1965 Voting Rights Act by President Lyndon Johnson, the Rev. Jesse Jackson told a black women's group Tuesday that minorities must fight for equity now that the battle for freedom is won.
 "Freedom is going from the outside in," Jackson said. "Equity is going from the bottom up."
 "We may be freer 20 years later, but we're becoming less equal."
 Jackson was keynote speaker at the national convention of Delta Sigma Theta, a women's service organization. The theme for the meeting held in Dallas, which claims 125,000 members, is "Equity to the Third Power: E³ = Education x Employment x Empowerment."
 Jackson encouraged women to buy stocks in corporations, so they could secure more financial clout and have financial maneuverability.
 Black college enrollment has declined drastically during the past 10 years, a pattern Jackson blames on the "insensitivity of our president."
 Jackson said he wants to refocus attention on college campuses by holding a hearing during football season at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.
 "We want to have a major hearing on that campus during football season where our students are drawing millions of dollars and have our students not just on the fields but in the chemistry labs as well," he said.
 From 1974 to 1976 black enrollment at colleges increased 19 percent, but "our allies in the freedom movement have become our adversaries in the equity movement and enrollment began to decline," Jackson said.

Jackson said a toll-free telephone number should be created to help students needing information on admissions and financial assistance.
 Jackson said minorities should use a candidate's stand on the Voting Rights Act as a "litmus" test before deciding who to support.
 Leon Haley, attorney for the Fort Worth chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, vowed to seek busing for three additional all-black high schools that currently are not included in the program if the court-ordered desegregation plan is reopened.

Reagan's tax proposal may aid 'fat cats' more

Associated Press
 AUSTIN — Federal efforts to stamp out tax deductions for three-martini lunches will hurt hard-working waitresses and taxi drivers more than "fat cats," former New Orleans Mayor Moon Landrieu said Tuesday.
 "Proposed changes in the federal tax code could cost thousands of Texans their jobs and cause economic difficulty in cities that benefit from conventions and trade shows," Landrieu, also a former U.S. Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, told a news conference.

The coalition particularly opposes a section that would not allow businesses to deduct expenses for refreshments with sales prospects, business receptions, hospitality suites and tickets to sporting or cultural events. A deduction for a meal with a business prospect would be limited to $25 per person and 50 percent of any amount above that.
 Landrieu said the federal tax proposal would "be a blueprint for disaster with negative consequences for most cities and their small businesses, hotels, restaurants, convention centers, theaters and sports teams."
 "This is not a case of soak the fat cats," he added. "This proposal would hurt the waitresses, the hotel workers, the taxi drivers and a lot more...."

Landrieu said he was making a tour of 21 cities as a spokesman for the Main Stream Coalition, "a group of business, civic and economic development leaders concerned about the impact of the tax code changes on the nation's cities."

Fort Worth ISD battles busing issue

Associated Press
 FORT WORTH — A black community leader has accused Fort Worth school board members of trying to "reconfirm your belief in separate but equal" by seeking an end to busing.
 Reby Cary, president of the Fort Worth Black Chamber of Commerce, said Monday that black leaders "will not crawl away" from the issue and said he won't accept "separate but equal" beliefs.
 The school board voted 5-3 Monday to ask a federal judge to end the school district's 14-year-old busing program. The three votes against the proposal came from the board's minority members.

 Minority leaders vowed to fight that request when it goes before U.S. District Judge Eldon Mahon, who oversees the desegregation plan for the 65,000-student school district.
 The Fort Worth Independent School District operates under a desegregation plan adopted in 1983. Busing was cut back 75 percent and now involves only second- and third-graders who attend 20 Fort Worth elementary schools.
