Free gifts
Salespeople court Ags

Need a new highlighter pen, a "chip clip" or a painter's cap? Several long-distance telephone companies, newspapers and other service companies are offering free gifts and special rates to Texas A&M students this fall.

Concession permits and table reservations must be obtained by all businesses wishing to advertise their services on campus.

"Anything that will be of service to a student will be approved," said Daralyn Wallace, conference assistant at the MSC.

MCI, STAR-TEL, Call America and University Communications are the long-distance telephone services available to students, Wallace said.

MCI is offering a special to A&M students which includes no fees, no minimum monthly charge and no hook-up charge, said Dennis Heinz, an MCI representative.

MCI, Call America and University Communications will be available in the MSC until Friday.

Tina Thompson, director of marketing for Call America, said the company is offering 30 minutes free with no installation charge.

University Communications has a $5 set-up charge, said James Stracener, a representative for the company.

Sonia Benton, also a representative for University Communications, said that their company is the only company to offer information comparing University Communications rates with GTE rates on the phone bill.

STAR-TEL is offering an "Aggie Special," which offers free set-up and no monthly charge, said Lisa Kastensmidt, a student representative for the organization.

GTE long-distance service is also available to A&M students. Students can sign up for the service at the Aggeland Inn until Friday, said John Wallace, GTE Public Affairs Manager. After Friday, students can receive service at the two GTE phone marts located in Culpepper Plaza and in Ardan's Shopping Center, Wallace said.

Newspaper subscriptions are also available in the MSC.

The Brazos News Service is offering subscriptions to six newspapers, said Charlotte Vass, a receptionist for the company. She said the rates have been discounted for the fall semester.

Also, USA Today is offering a free t-shirt with every subscription, Vass said.

Aggies can also receive a free "chip clip" when they subscribe to the Houston Chronicle, said Julian McMurrey, the distributor for the Houston Chronicle.

A student subscription is "almost half-price" and is available the entire year, said McMurrey.

The Dallas Times Herald also has a table in the MSC. The Herald is offering a $15.50 subscription for the semester, almost half of the regular subscription price, said Bruce Barry, a dealer for the Herald.

Students can buy subscriptions to the Herald until Friday in the MSC, said Barry, but can receive the discounted subscription until Sept. 13 at 3806 South Texas Ave.

Aggies can find Eagle representatives at the MSC and Post Oak Mall. The Eagle is offering student subscriptions for $8.15 per month, said Gary Young, a representative for the Eagle. Students also receive an "Eagle Highlights Texas A&M" highlighter, Young said.

Cable services can be purchased from McCaw Cablevision until Friday in the MSC, at the satellite office in Woodstone Shopping Center or at the main business office.

At the Woodstone office, McCaw is giving away painter caps and AM-FM radios with subscriptions to Ginenax or HBO.

Refrigerator rental is another service offered to Aggies. Students can rent a refrigerator at the Student Government office throughout the semester, said Mike Sheffield, a representative for Student Government.

Correction

In an article entitled "Society obsessed with 'perfect body'" in Tuesday's Battalion, an error was made in attributing information and quotes to Bryan psychiatrist Dr. John Kinross-Wright.

Kinross-Wright was not interviewed, nor does his practice deal with anorexia or bulimia cases.

The reporter, D'Anna Heideman, got the information from "Body Perception is only skin deep," a pamphlet by Dr. Ken Bunttoni.

The Battalion and Heideman regret the error.
