Dismembered bodies may be identified

 HOUSTON — Authorities says the fingerprints from a hand found in one of three trash bags filled with parts of two people's dismembered bodies may help them determine the identities.

Two human heads, two legs, a torso and a hand were found Sunday in three trash bags in rural northeast Harris County by a passer-by, Harris County sheriff's Lt. Joe Sekler said.

He said investigators will take fingerprints from the hand found to see if it matches with fingerprints on file.

The body parts belonged to a man in his 30s and a woman who was about six months pregnant, authorities said.

Though medical examiners have not determined a cause of death, the man appeared to have been shot at least once in the right eye and the woman three times in the head, apparently with a small-caliber weapon, Detective Ronnie Phillips Sr. said Monday.

Investigators said the two appeared to have been dead at least 48 hours when the bodies were found.

Because there was no blood at the scene, detectives believe the bodies were dismembered somewhere else and dumped in the rural area.

Mexico president planning Japan trip to expand exports

Associated Press
 MEXICO CITY — In what appears to be an intensification of Mexican diplomatic and commercial efforts abroad, President Miguel de la Madrid will speak to the U.N. General Assembly and then travel to Japan.

A presidential spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said the trip to Japan starting Oct. 6 is part of an effort to find new markets for Mexican exports.

De la Madrid is scheduled to be in New York from Sept. 24 to 26 to attend the 40th anniversary session of the General Assembly, where some 70 nations will be represented by their chiefs of state.

"The presence of Mexico will permit an exposition of the importance our country gives to that organization, as well as a chance for conversations with the secretary general of the U.N. and with chiefs of state who exert an important influence on the international community," de la Madrid said.

In a document sent to Congress asking permission to leave the country, the president also said his trip to the United Nations "offers an exceptional opportunity to evaluate the advances and retreats of that community of nations, which constitutes the only international mechanism which states have available to install a peaceful world order."

The president's major foreign policy effort has been in the Contadora group, formed in January 1984 by Mexico, Panama, Colombia and Venezuela to seek a peaceful resolution to Central American tensions.

"Mexico has regional priorities, but it cannot isolate itself nor maintain itself aloof from states of other continents," de la Madrid has said.

His trip to Japan, scheduled from Oct. 6 to 9, has as its main purpose opening new products for Mexican exports. That is seen as key to efforts to pull the nation out of the economic crisis.

McGruff is 'super hero' for abused children

Associated Press
 PORT ARTHUR — As a child, Ron Robertson wanted to be a "super crime fighter like Superman." In a sense, the 37-year-old Port Arthur police detective is fulfilling that childhood wish.

"I've got enough gumption to try this," Robertson says of his alter-ego, a character called McGruff, the Crime Dog. "And, the kids think of him as super crime-fighting hero."

Robertson, a seven-year veteran of the department, has spent the last year and a half in the juvenile division. While many of his cases deal with children who are in trouble with the law, some deal with child abuse — physical, sexual and psychological.

"I love children," he says. "I have a 9-year-old daughter and I know how special children are."

Robertson, along with Rosemary Hanicak, a Port Arthur Health Department employee, founded the Child Abuse Task Force last summer. The task force is open to any interested agency or individual.

"I knew the Beaumont police had McGruff puppets," he says. "But I don't think anyone had the costume."

Robertson says the $320 investment was worthwhile.

"We've probably gotten $3 million worth of value out of it," he says. "Because of the attention McGruff has received and because of our television spots, in the last month, four cases of abuse turned because the kids saw McGruff. The kids brought the abuse to the attention of another person. There's no telling how many others have been helped because of McGruff."

Because of that, he says, "It's worth all the sweat in the world."

"When I first put on the costume, I took a lot of teasing," he says. "But the officers here realize it's a good technique in keeping a child's limited attention span interested. And, the teasing is worth it because I know McGruff is getting through to the kids."

Robertson's office is decorated with posters and pieces of children's artwork. It also serves as a video taping room where Robertson interviews young victims of abuse.

"There's a lot of new techniques available in dealing with child abuse," Robertson says. "And there's a lot of good, qualified officers in the Golden Triangle who successfully use the techniques in interviewing children. I'm just part of that team."
