Prostitution ring's leader sentenced

Associated Press

HOUSTON — A 32-year-old woman convicted of running a prostitution ring in three states was sentenced Thursday to five years' probation, fined $10,000 and ordered to perform 250 hours of community service work.

In addition to that sentence for Penelope Hatteras of Sugar Land, U.S. District Judge John Singleton also ordered probation for two of her associates.

Singleton said he believed the sentence was appropriate because Hatteras' past was "relatively free of prior problems."

Hatteras declined to comment on the sentence.

She was convicted by a federal court jury Aug. 9 on 21 counts of conspiracy, using interstate facilities to promote prostitution and violating federal "white slavery" laws barring the interstate transportation of prostitutes.

Forum sponsors ideas exchange

The CLU is associated with the national organization that defends all freedoms defined in the Bill of Rights, as well as those outlined in the 14th Amendment, Nave said.

While the CLU supports freedom of speech, it does not endorse the separate opinions expressed by any individual, Nave said. Its purpose is not to take sides with any organization, but to ensure that they have the opportunity to voice their ideas and points of view.

Nave's basic concept of freedom of speech is the ability to educate others to one's point of view. He believes that other basic human rights are facilitated by freedom of speech. "With the freedom of speech, all the others are close behind," Nave said.

There is an organization whose sole purpose is to protect the freedom central to the American way of life.

The CLU is associated with the national organization that defends all freedoms defined in the Bill of Rights, as well as those outlined in the 14th Amendment.

While the CLU supports freedom of speech, it does not endorse the separate opinions expressed by any individual. Its purpose is not to take sides with any organization, but to ensure that they have the opportunity to voice their ideas and points of view.

Brian Sterling, a CLU chairman, said that the MSC Open House held at the beginning of the semester provided a perfect opportunity to begin gathering groups to participate in the speakers' forum. Various groups represented at the Open House were approached and offered the opportunity to communicate their messages to a mass audience.

Thursday's forum was composed of groups that the CLU believes represent more liberal points of view.

Five groups participated in the forum. One of the organizations represented was Students Against Apartheid. Sam Aletan, vice president of the organization, called apartheid undemocratic.

"All America's rights belong to none of the blacks in South Africa," Aletan said.

Amnesty International, another group represented Thursday afternoon, favors the release of people imprisoned for political, social or religious reasons. The group also opposes the use of torture and the death penalty.

The members of Green Peace, which opposes the use of nuclear power in any way, shape or form, communicated their message uniquely by performing a skit titled "The Wheel of Misfortune." The moral of the story was that the only way to win the nuclear game is not to play at all.

The National Organization for Women is well known for its support of women's rights. However, the group did not make a point of stating its specific opinions. Because NOW is trying to build up its membership at the moment, it did not want to set up any biases, the group said.

Gay Student Services was represented by President Marco Roberts. He addressed the issue of AIDS and recapped the general goals of the GSS.

At the next forum, the CLU hopes to give more conservative groups a chance to speak. If your organization is interested in this opportunity to express its views, contact Brian Sterling of the CLU.
