Jail People being held without formal charges, ACLU says

Associated Press

BEAUMONT, Texas - People are being kept in jail for weeks without formal charges because of a district attorney's interpretation of the Texas Speedy Trial Act, according to a published report.

The policies of Orange County District Attorney Steve Howard are being criticized by the American Civil Liberties Union as unconstitutional, the Beaumont Enterprise reported Sunday.

'I think he (Howard) doesn't understand the law or he's selectively following it," said Jim Herrington, an Austin lawer with the Texas branch of the ACLU.

But Howard said he has not violated prisoners' rights.

Texas law states a charge or indictment must be filed within a reasonable amount of time, but Howard said the term "reasonable" is ambiguous

He said his office has 120 days to prepare for trial in a felony case under the state's Speedy Trial Act, and he said he interprets that as allowing him 120 days to indict or formally charge a person.

"I don't think it's a good idea for people to be in jail," he said. "I'm interested in seeing people arraigned on a daily basis.'

E. Robert Larson, an ACLU law-yer in New York, said holding peo-

The Read Building, formerly known as East Kyle, was dedicated Saturday in honor of Thomas and Joan Read of Houston

David Eller, chairman of the Texas A&M System Board of Regents dedicated the building.

"It is our hope that the Read's name will serve as an inspiration to Aggies to learn and play," Eller said.

The 93,000-square-foot facility located under the east side of Kyle Field includes classrooms, dance studios, racquetball, volleyball and basketball courts and physical education laboratories

Read, a self-made millionaire and owner of an oil field equipment firm, has given more than $900,000 in scholarships to Texas A&M.

Four of the scholarships are designated for students in the Corp of Cadets, 10 are for students majoring in industrial distribution and others. are for students in health and physi-

Fifty A&M students receive scholarships annually through these endowments, A&M President Frank andiver said. At the dedication, Read anple without filing formal charges could be a violation of the 14th Amendment.

The newspaper also said Howard's office also is bypassing the legal step of filing charges through a jus-tice of the peace, where the accused could request an examining hearing.

Instead, cases now usually are taken directly to a grand jury.

Howard said his policies do not deny people their constitutional rights because they are brought before a justice of the peace, who sets a bond and reads them their rights.

But four days of August rosters showed that eight and sometimes nine prisoners were being held on arrest sheets and not formal charges, the Enterprise reported. Those ros-ters indicated the prisoners had been in jail for more than a week.

One prisoner was a 17-year-old man arrested for burglary of a vehi-cle. He spent 58 days in jail, and 60 days passed before his indictment.

Lawyer Steve Carlton said a suspect who can afford bond could slip through Orange's present system when formal charges are not filed. Carlton said a transient client accused of possessing cocaine had been locked up in jail three weeks without a formal charge.

The man was released on a personal recognizance bond, sidestep-ping his original $10,000 bond, the Enterprise reported.

Gramm trying to keep low profile in Senate Associated Press tion from the panel and his decision to join the GOP. He resigned from the seniority system kept him from WASHINGTON - Phil Gramm says he has fulfilled his goal of tak-ing a "low profile" in the U.S. Senate since his arrival in January.

"Now there are probably mem-bers of the Senate who would laugh at that," he adds quickly.

During a recent interview in his office, Gramm said he made a conscious decision when he came to the Senate that he would shun invitations to appear on national news programs and concentrate on organizing his office and looking after the needs of Texas.

Gramm was frequently the center of national attention during the budget battles of the first Reagan administration when he was a member of the House. Then a Democrat on the Budget Committee, he defended the Republican administration's economic programs against his own party leadership.

That stance resulted in his ejec-his House seat and used the ensuing special election as a referendum on Reagan's policies, winning re-election handily.

When veteran Republican Sen. John Tower decided not to seek an-other term, Gramm easily moved up to the Senate

Despite his "low profile," Gramm, now the junior member of the Armed Services Committee, which Tower chaired, got his name on an amendment to the defense authori-zation bill that he calls "the most comprehensive reform of defense procurement in American history.

He was credited with getting Corpus Christi a proposed new Navy battleship base, "first prize" in a fivestate sweepstakes. It will mean "a quarter of a billion dollars a year of economic impact in Texas," Gramm

Though he was disappointed that getting on the Senate Budget Committee, Gramm said he worked "extensively" on the budget, though he 'did it all basically behind the

He has nominated six federal judges in Texas and quotes observ-ers as saying the appointees' conser-vative view of their role "substantially changes the federal judiciary in

But his most important accom-plishment so far, he said, has been earning "the respect of my col-leagues in the Senate."
