A&M to take part in teleconference on drug abuse

By TAMMY KIRK
Staff Writer

The cocaine epidemic and the addiction process are two of the topics to be discussed Wednesday at a teleconference on drug abuse in the workplace.

The teleconference will be telecast live via satellite from the Annenberg Center for Health Sciences located in Rancho Mirage, Calif. and can be viewed in 201 MSC from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Admission is free, but is limited to Texas A&M faculty, staff and students, says Nancy Baker, program coordinator for the office of professional development, which is sponsoring the teleconference.

A nationally prominent faculty will discuss, in a five-hour assessment, crucial and contemporary issues relating to drug abuse in the workplace, Baker says. The teleconference will be moderated by Alex Drier, a former correspondent and investigative network anchorman who is now a board member of the Annenberg Center for Health Sciences.

The local moderator at the Memorial Student Center will be Dr. Lee J. Phillips, director of the office of professional development. His introduction will begin at 9:30 a.m. before the teleconference begins at 10 a.m.

Other topics to be discussed are corporate drug screening tests, the multiple legal problems that exist, wrongful termination in dealing with the substance-impaired employee, and treatments and future trends.

Baker says at each viewing site, telephones will provide an opportunity for the audience to interact with the faculty.

"People can phone in questions which will be passed on to the faculty and answered live," she says.

After the question and answer period via the teleconference, three local representatives from the Bryan-College Station will give presentations on the local and campus aspects of substance abuse, Baker says.

Bill Turner, district attorney; Dr. John Kinross-Wright, psychiatrist; and Dr. Malon Southerland, vice president of student services and chairman of the A&M Alcohol and Drug Awareness Committee, will give overviews of drug abuse from a legal, medical and law enforcement standpoint, respectively.

The local speakers are scheduled to speak at 3 p.m. and a question and answer period will follow at 3:30 p.m.

"I hope the students and faculty will take advantage of the teleconference," Baker says.

To attend the teleconference at a viewing site in one of 15 major cities across the country, a person must pay $225, and groups with two or more must pay $195.

But, Baker says, through Symposiums International, a company which markets these programs to colleges and universities, A&M paid a special rate of just $225 for the whole campus to view the teleconference. The only stipulation for receiving the special rate is that attendance be limited to the faculty, staff and students, Baker says.

KAMU will provide the large screen and receivers for the teleconference, Baker says.

MSC Council to discuss Town Hall, master plan

By MEG CADIGAN
Staff Writer

The financial results of MSC Town Hall's Cheap Trick/Night Ranger concert will be announced tonight at the MSC Council meeting, says President Denis Davis.

The Council will meet at 6:30 p.m. in 216T MSC.

Town Hall's plans for the rest of the year also will be discussed, Davis says.

She says the Council will hear reports from the various MSC standing committees, including the building operations, program study and program review committees.

Davis says the Council will hold sessions before the Council meeting to rank items which will become part of MSC master plan.

The plan is an outline of the long-term goals of the MSC organization.

she says. It is designed help the MSC meet the needs of the student body for the next five years.

Davis says this process also helps the Council to decide what types of resources will be needed.

The items listed for ranking were suggested by Council members and other MSC organizations during a master planning session at MSC Fall Retreat.
