SMU a 'big game' for Sherrill

Aggies need TV victory to impress bowl scouts

By PETE HERNDON
Sports Writer

Texas A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill faces probably the most important game of his four-year stint with the Aggies, when No. 20 SMU visits Kyle Field Saturday night.

A&M is ranked No. 19 by the United Press International coaches' poll, marking the first time the Aggies have graced a Top 20 poll during the season since Sherrill came here in 1982. The Associated Press pollsters, comprised of the nation's sports writers, has yet to rank A&M in its Top 20 this season.

But besides the shot at an AP ranking, another reason A&M-SMU will be the proverbial "big game" for Sherrill is that it's the Aggies' second national television appearance this year. And since A&M lost the first one to Alabama, it needs a win to impress the postseason bowl committees.

ESPN will carry the game and has rescheduled it for a 6:45 p.m. kickoff at Kyle Field.

Another reason Saturday's game means so much to A&M is that SMU may be the toughest team left on the Aggies' schedule, with the exception of No. 14 Arkansas. A&M needs to win this game to stay on the heels of Southwest Conference-leading Baylor. The Bears are 5-0 in SWC play, while the Aggies are 3-1.

Still another reason this game means a lot to the Aggies is the old "revenge factor." A&M has lost close games the last two times the teams met, losing 10-7 in 1983 and 28-20 in 1984.

At the A&M press conference Tuesday, Sherrill said the last two losses to SMU were due to the "drastic mismatch," physically, between the two teams.

And although A&M is not out-matched as badly this year, Sherrill said SMU has yet another advantage.

"There is not another team in the country that has the talent sideline for sideline as SMU," Sherrill said. "I don't think we can physically match up to them. We're going to have to rely on our quickness, defensively. Offensively, they do a great job of running the end-back sweep."

One of the key matchups Saturday will be SMU's right guard David Richards against A&M defensive end Rod Saddler. This matchup will demonstrate some of that physical advantage the Mustangs possess. At 262-pounds, Saddler will still give away about 40-pounds.

"They (SMU) have the advantage because they're bigger than we are," Sherrill said. "We're going to have to control the ball."

A&M quarterback Kevin Murray agrees with Sherrill.

"I would think that ball control will be the key thing for us to concentrate on against SMU," Murray said. "Their offense is very similar to ours. They are as explosive as we are. Our defense has been playing well, but I don't think we have been tested like we are going to be tested this Saturday. We're just going to have to pin our ears back and go after them for 60 minutes."

That won't be easy, Sherrill said, because SMU has matured as a football team since being upset by Arizona Oct. 5.

"I would say that their team is as good as it was in 1982," he said. "And in 1982 (SMU was 11-0-1, including a 7-3 Cotton Bowl win over Pittsburgh), they were pretty good."

So it seems that to beat the Mustangs, the Aggies will have to play error-free, something they didn't do against Rice, and also overcome some minor injuries.

Sherrill said 14 Aggie players are still injured. The ones that will affect A&M the most are offensive tackle Marshall Land's knee injury, fullback Roger Vick's shoulder and offensive tackle Doug Williams' illness.

Sherrill said Land will not play this week, but may be ready for Arkansas. Vick will not go through contact drills at all this week and could be ready to play by Saturday.

"Doug Williams has been running a high temperature all week," he said. "Hopefully, they can keep him full of enough antibiotics that he will be well for the game, but his strength will be way down."

"Way down" is where the best of this game will be in the SWC.

A&M and SMU have both lost to Baylor and another defeat would just about end any Cotton Bowl hopes for the Aggies. SMU is a ready ineligible for the New Year Day trip to Dallas because of NCAA probation.

This has led coaches, like Texas' Fred Akers and Arkansas' Ken Hatfield, to say that SMU conference games shouldn't count in standings. However, Sherrill does agree with this idea.

"I think when you line up on the field — you line up and play," he said, "it's not going to count — don't let it."
