Tech may be looking for coach

Bellard says he hasn't discussed Raider job

Associated Press
 STARKVILLE, Miss. — Former Texas A&M Coach Emory Bellard says he has not been contacted about a possible football coaching vacancy at Texas Tech and that his only desire is to help his Mississippi State team close its season with victories.

The 5-4 Bulldogs are idle this weekend and face season-ending games at Louisiana State and against arch-rival Mississippi. The Bulldogs reportedly are still in the running for a berth in the Independence Bowl.

The Dallas Morning News reported that Bellard, in his seventh year at Mississippi State, was among the leading candidates to replace Jerry Moore at the end of the current season. Moore has a 15-35-2 record in his four-plus years with the Red Raiders. This season Texas Tech is 3-5 and has lost its last five games.

"I don't know anything at all about Texas Tech," said Bellard, who has one season remaining on his contract at State. "To my knowledge, there's not even a job opening there ... I've had no contact whatsoever with anybody at Texas Tech. None."

Bellard, 57, coached high school football in Texas for 15 years before spending six years as an assistant at the University of Texas. He coached 6½ years at Texas A&M before resigning mid-way through the 1978 season.

"I don't have any thoughts right now except those concerning this football season," Bellard said. "We're gonna try with everything we've got to win these next two football games. That's the only thing on my mind right now related to coaching."

The News also said coach Bobby Collins of Southern Methodist, a former head coach at Southern Mississippi, was a leading candidate to replace Bellard. The report also said that Collins, a Mississippi State graduate, would replace Charley Scott as MSU athletic director.

"That's news to me," Scott said of the report. "I recognize that these kinds of rumors develop all the time, particularly around athletics. But from the knowledge I have, they are just that — rumors."

Spurs end 2-game skid, deal Bullets 81-80 loss

Associated Press

LANDOVER, Md. — Mike Mitchell hit a 13-foot jumper from the right corner with 40 seconds left, giving the San Antonio Spurs an 81-80 National Basketball Association victory over the Washington Bullets Wednesday night.

The victory ended a two-game losing streak for the Spurs, who dealt the Bullets their fourth straight defeat.

After Mitchell put San Antonio ahead, Jeff Malone missed a jumper for the Bullets and the Spurs ran out the 24-second clock before turning the ball over to Washington with two seconds remaining.

After a time out, Dan Roundfield attempted an inbound pass for the Bullets, but the ball was tapped away by Mitchell and time expired.

Alvin Robertson led San Antonio with 18 points, followed by Mitchell and Johnny Moore with 13 apiece.

Malone had 23 for the Bullets, while Robinson scored 22 and Roundfield 15.

Portland 111, Dallas 109

DALLAS — Clyde Drexler scored 28 points and Sam Bowie blocked a driving layup by Rolando Blackman with two seconds left to lead the Portland Trail Blazers to a 111-109 National Basketball Association victory over Dallas Wednesday night.

With 1:20 to play, Portland broke a 106-106 tie on a layup by Mychal Thompson.

As Portland held a 110-109 lead with six seconds left, Bowie made one of two free throws, then blocked Blackman's attempt to tie the score as the buzzer sounded.

A&M-Arkansas game to be on national TV

ESPN has chosen to show Texas A&M on national television once again.

The Entertainment and Sports Programming Network announced Wednesday it will feature the A&M game on Nov. 16 when it plays Arkansas.

The game was originally scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. from Kyle Field but will now kickoff at 6:45 p.m. The pregame show will start at 6:30 p.m.

It will be the third time the Ags have been on ESPN this season.

On Sept. 14, the Ags lost to Alabama, 29-10, in front of the national TV cameras, but turned around and upset SMU Nov. 3, 19-17.

A&M's game with Texas on Nov. 28 will be on national TV.

For Arkansas, it will be the second week in a row it will be on national TV. The Razorbacks will host Baylor-ABC, Saturday.

Due to the change of starting times for the football game, the Texas A&M volleyball team had to reschedule its game for Nov. 16 also.

The spikers will now host Louisville at 3 p.m. instead of the original 7:30 p.m. starting time.
