Forecast: Job growth in '86 to remain steady

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The number of people holding full-time jobs in Texas next year will grow by about 200,000 — the same 3 percent rate of growth the state experienced in 1985, according to forecasts Tuesday from Texas Commerce Bankshares Inc.

"We think that will continue next year and continue throughout the decade," said James L. Cochrane, chief economist for the Houston-based holding company. Most of the new jobs will occur in government, trade, service and finance areas, but not in manufacturing, he said, adding that nationally, job growth should be about 2.6 percent.

"One basic point is that Texas for a long time has had the enjoyment of doubling any national (economic) statistic," Cochrane said. "That's no longer going to be true, but we'll be 10 to 20 percent above the national level."

For the U.S. economy, Texas Commerce forecasts a 4 percent growth for 1986, with a tapering off in the last half of the year.

"I was told we're a little bit on the optimistic side," Cochrane said, comparing his forecast with those of other economists.

Inflation, he said, should rise slightly to about 5 percent.

Texas will do better than the forecast if the national economy is stronger than expected and if oil prices improve.

The forecast will be too optimistic if tax reform legislation hinders the oil industry, if tax law changes encourage investment in the state, or if protectionist moves trigger retaliation overseas, Cochrane said.

Houston would continue in its slow recovery from the energy recession and bring to 1.6 million the number of jobs in the area — missing the high-water mark at the peak of the oil boom in 1982.

"The early 1980s were an aberration," he said.

Other economic indicators in Texas' largest city also will improve with bank deposits up 9 percent in 1986 to $40 billion and retail sales repeating this year's 8 percent growth.

Construction will total $2.8 billion — $1.75 billion non-residential and $1.05 billion residential, Texas Commerce said.

The residential figure, however, is just one-third the amount during the 1982 peak.

Cochrane said the downtown office space glut has been cut in Houston to 20 percent, just four percentage points above the national average.

The holding company, the fourth-largest in the state, also casts a slight slowing of the rapidly expanding Dallas-Fort Worth economy, with employment up 3 percent but construction down 5 percent.

Bank deposits should grow by 8 percent.

Baptist rally held to protest state controls on churches

Associated Press

AUSTIN — "Let My People Go," read a large banner spread Tuesday in front of the Capitol as hundreds of Baptist church members protested state controls.

"Jesus is Lord, Not Caesar," said a sign displayed by Gary Wagoner, pastor of the Harvest Baptist Church of Hamptonville, N.C.

"This is primarily a Texas fight but it is a national problem," said Wiley Cameron, pastor of the Peoples Baptist Church in Corpus Christi. "We are protesting the constant encroachment of government in our schools, our homes and our day care centers."

As head of the Peoples Baptist church, Cameron takes the place of the late Lester Roloff, a fiery evangelist who fought state attempts to regulate church youth homes on the Texas Gulf Coast for six years.

He died in a plane crash in 1980. In October of this year the Texas Supreme Court ruled that church-operated homes could operate without state licenses.

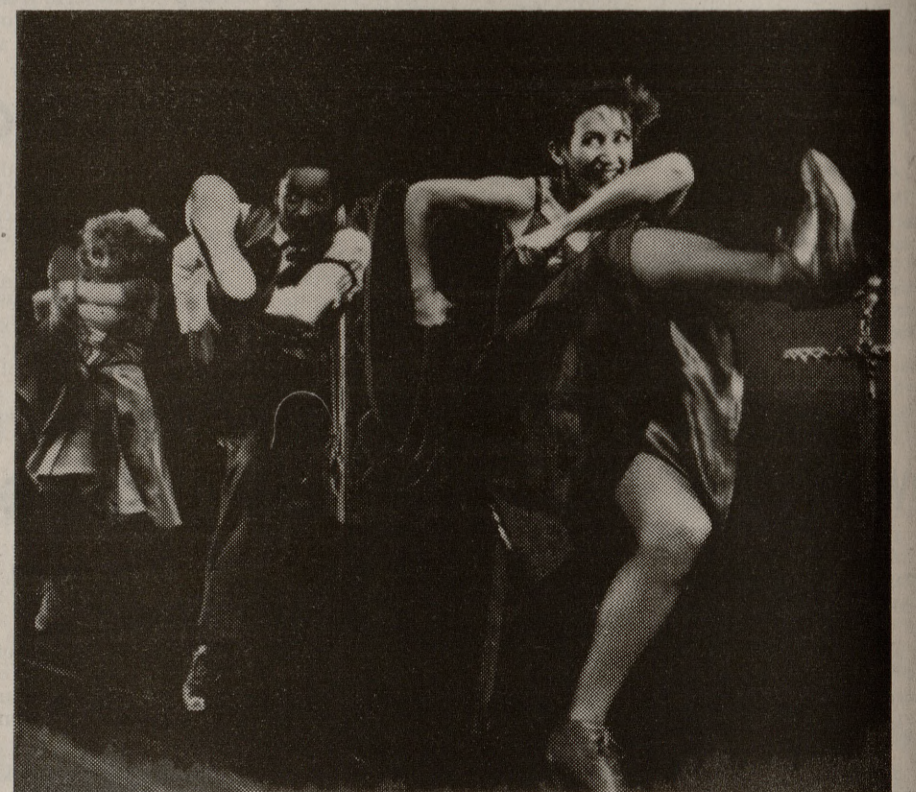

The state had sued the church after Roloff refused to have three children's homes regulated by the Department of Human Resources.

"One example of government encroachment is the Roloff homes," Cameron said. "These other people are here because of examples their states."

"God's Word is First," said another sign.

"Save Our Children," said a sign carried by Bobby Rorrer, pastor of the Goodwill Missionary Baptist Church in Patrick Springs, Va.
