Koldus discusses concerns of students at symposium

By CHRIS SIGURDSON

Dr. John Koldus, Texas A&M vice president of student services, addressed student concerns on subjects ranging from campus construction to student representation on the Texas A&M System Board of Regents in his speech at a cold Sully's Symposium Wednesday.

After brief remarks on his responsibilities at the University, Koldus, in an overcoat and gloves, opened the outdoor symposium for questions from an audience of about 50 peo-

Interest focused on construction, renovations and money as Koldus, a member of the Five Year Master Planning Committee, discussed the committee's projects.

Because of a student enrollment forecast of 20,000 by a planning committee in 1963, Koldus said many facilities are inadequate for the needs of the present student Steps to correct this, he said, in-

Anti-apartheid group to sponsor concert

By RICHARD PEARCE

In an effort to call attention to apartheid, the now defunct Dr. G's will open its doors Friday at 8 p.m. for one night to feature The Killer Bees, a reggae band from Austin.

Students Against Apartheid, a

University-recognized organization and sponsor of the event, hope to create more interest in the anti-apartheid movement.

"Our primary objective is an ideo-logical one," said Norman Muraya, president of Students Against Apartheid. "We invite everyone whose world is not black or white but enjoys the full color and beauty of Muraya said a short presentation will be made early to tell how Texas A&M money is promoting apartheid, but he said there will be no lengthy speeches and the presentalengthy speeches and the presenta-tion will be kept brief.

Muraya added that the event is

The Killer Bees were chosen to perform because of the type of music they play, Muraya said.

"Reggae music is very positive music about people and people get-ting along together," he said.

"They want to help a student or-ganization and it's for a good cause,"

The event will begin with music from Subversive Youth, followed by a short presentation and finally music by The Killer Bees.

There are rumors that there also will be some unscheduled performances, one of them by Dru Wilson, lead guitarist from Four Hams on Rye, a local band.

There will be a $5 cover charge and liquor will not be served because Dr. G's does not have a liquor license. However, people can bring their own liquor.

Students Against Apartheid will have tables set up outside Dr. G's to answer any questions and will be selling Free South Africa T-shirts.

Profits will go to Students Against Apartheid.

Holiday schedule changes

By CRAIG RENFRO

The holiday schedule Texas A&M University Syst staff and faculty has be changed because the Texas Le lature has declared April 1986, a compulsory state holi celebrating the state's Sesquit tennial.

The change will not affet A&M students, said Dr. Malo Southerland, assistant vice pre-dent for student services. As a result of the change, AM faculty and staff will receive out fewer day for their spring break Southerland said. Spring break for faculty and staff will be Mard 20 and 21.
